"We got three and the Air Force got three," a Navy spokesman said.

Reds Claim Seven Down

Col. Edwin J. Witzinger of Lusk, Wyo., deputy commander of the 2nd Air Division said the strikes were a complete success. All planes were reported to have returned safely with only minor damage. No enemy aircraft were sighted.

A Hanoi dispatch broadcast by the New China News Agency declared North Viet Nam's armed forces shot down seven planes.

Steel Outlook Darkens Industry's Swap Proposal Rejected

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Strike fears rose today after the United Steelworkers Union rejected a steel industry proposal to swap some contract improvements for an extension of the May 1 strike deadline.

"I'm never discouraged, but I am disappointed now," said steelworkers President David J. McDonald Thursday after rejection of the latest industry proposal.

Both the union and the basic steel industry declined to reveal the cash value of the proposal.

But a union source said it was about five cents an hour per man for the duration of a limited agreement that could run from 60 days to 6 months. Some

This missile, which a spokesman said the Air Force had used previously in North Viet Nam, was described as a 600-pounder guided visually by the pilot through a radio control unit.

70 Others Attack

About 70 Air Force planes rained bombs and rockets on three roads and rail bridges. These were at Kim Cuong, on Route 8 only seven miles east of the Laotian frontier; the Trai Hoi highway bridge, 80 miles north of the Vietnamese border; and the Phu Diem Chau railroad bridge, just south of the 17th parallel.

About 80 Navy planes swept in from the sea and concentrated on highway structures.

All planes returned safely with only minor damage, the spokesman said, adding that no enemy planes were sighted.

He said a direct hit was registered on the north side of the Bai Duc Thon Bridge, 170 miles south of Hanoi, and its north approach also was damaged.

Two parallel bridges were attacked at Xom Ca Trang, 185 miles south of Hanoi. The spokesman said one span of the larger bridge was knocked into the water. One hit was reported on the smaller bridge, but the spokesman said dust and smoke prevented an accurate estimate of the damage.

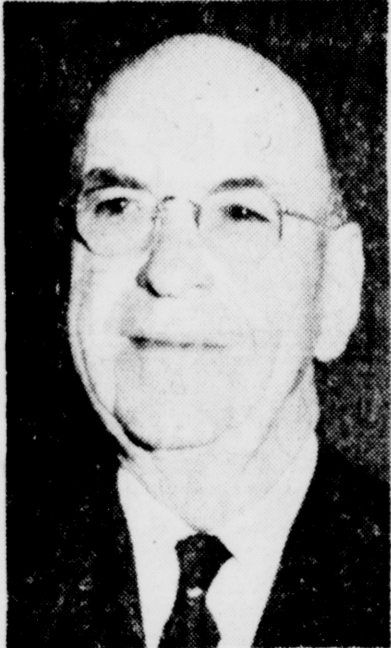

Four Warships Sunk

The South Vietnamese air force claimed it sank four North Vietnamese warships Thursday night in its second night raid above the 17th parallel.

The spokesman did not explain how the airmen identified the craft as warships in the dark.

The size of the vessels was not given. The spokesman said they were assumed to be Communist warships because they were moving near the North Vietnamese coast, there was no report of friendly ships in the area, and they fired at the attacking planes.

The raid was led by Brig. Gen. Nguyen Cao Ky, the Vietnamese air force commander. The planes also strafed a Communist military installation at Vinh Son and set it ablaze after (Continued on Page 8, Col. 2)

Christians, Jews Mark Holy Days

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christians around the world paused again this Good Friday in solemn commemoration of the death of Christ on the cross. Jews prepared for the beginning at sundown of Passover, the most ancient of Jewish festivals.

Seder Feast Tonight

The Christian Holy Week neared Easter Sunday, the joyous day of the Resurrection. The Jewish Seder feast tonight ushers in a weeklong observance of the Israelite exodus from Egypt more than 2,000 years ago.

Thousands of Christian pilgrims thronged Rome and the Holy Land.

In Jerusalem's Jordan sector, worshippers crowded into the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which Christian tradition holds houses the marble tomb of Christ. After sunrise services, the pilgrims were to follow Christ's path to Calvary, singing and praying in the twisted stone-paved streets of Old Jerusalem.

Pope to Lead Millions

In Rome, Pope Paul VI leads the world's 500 million Roman Catholics in prayers he has changed this year to delete damaging references to Jews and others outside his church.

Italian Cardinal Fernando Cento was designated to conduct the "Mass of the Presanctified" in the Basilica of St. Mary Major with the Pope presiding.

The start of Passover coincides with Good Friday this year for the first time in several years.

In Moscow, a traditional seder was planned at the Israeli embassy. About 100 Jews in Moscow's Western community, including diplomats, journalists and visitors, were invited.

Agency Is To Give UR Data Savings Effectuated By Combining Jobs

George E. Yerry Jr., acting chairman of the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency today said that questions asked this week by Alderman John J. Naccarato (R) Third Ward, chairman of the Common Council's UR Committee will be answered in detail after the agency meets next Wednesday night.

Naccarato, in a letter to Yerry, released for publication Wednesday, said he felt the aldermen should have been made aware of reported "differences of opinion between the city and the federal government" relating to Part 1 of the urban renewal project.

On Thursday, Naccarato said he was surprised to learn of salary increases granted members of the UR staff. This information came, he said, after he had conferred with Eric Hemphill, executive director of the UR Agency, who had received a copy of the letter sent to Yerry.

Not Intentional

Naccarato said he felt the council members should have been notified of the raises since they involved expenditure of money.

Yerry, asked today if he felt the alderman's complaints were valid, felt in a sense that they were, but he did not think that the agency had been intentionally lax.

On the salary question, Yerry said he knew of no law requiring notification to the council of such action by the agency, but if the aldermen felt that they should get such notice, he saw no reason why it should not be given.

Saving on Jobs

Also on salary raises, Yerry said, a saving of $6,500 had been effected. Of this $4,500 had been saved by the combination of jobs and the combining of duties. The jobs of relocation director and property manager, plus the assistant in both have been combined, he said, after a separate budget provision had been made to add new personnel.

It was noted that Ralph Marallo, who heads both departments, and his assistant Max Mones, each received a $1,000 increase. Base pay was not mentioned. It was also reported that Hemphill's salary went from $13,500 to $14,000, but this was based on his original contract. The salary of his assistant, Ward B. Tongue was reported boosted from $7,500 to $8,000.

To Make Review

Salaries in the future, Yerry said, are to be reviewed annually by the agency.

Hemphill, in reply to the Naccarato letter, a copy of which he received Wednesday, said he was surprised at its contents because the agency had not received a request for full details of a report from the Housing

American Nazi Leader Is Slated as Paltz Speaker

The head of the "American Nazi Party" in the U.S. is the scheduled speaker at a lecture sponsored by a State University College club at 8 p. m. Wednesday, April 21 at the New Paltz campus, it was learned today.

Dr. John T. Von De Heide, advisor to the Social Science Club, told The Freeman that Rockwell was the scheduled lecturer in the first series of club-sponsored lectures on "Modern Political Ideologies." He said that Rockwell's office was contacted and the scheduled speaker reportedly had an engagement the previous night in Des Moines, Iowa. He said the club would agree to another ANP representative in place of Rockwell, but the Party leader was still the scheduled speaker at the SUC campus.

The lecture, tentatively set for the college's main auditorium, was expected to draw a large attendance in spite of the holiday recess.

Rockwell, a nationally controversial political figure, has long been active in ANP-National States Rights Party activities and an outspoken critic of the

Nixon Calls Soviet's Race Prejudice Worse

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard M. Nixon, reporting on his recent trip to the Soviet Union, says Negroes there "have a worse lot" than anywhere in the Southern United States.

Greater Than Anywhere

Racial prejudice in the Soviet Union "is greater than anywhere in the world, and a great many African students are leaving because of it," he says.

The former vice president discussed his impressions of the Soviet Union Thursday night in a departure from his prepared speech before 400 business leaders at the National Industrial Conference Board's first public affairs conference.

Nixon, who contrasted his recent visit to the one he made six years ago as vice president, said there has been "a great growth in racism and race prejudice."

Sees New Challenge

He predicted a strong leader will soon emerge, and Russia then will begin a new challenge to the United States in economics. He said the challenge will be military or in the field of space and predicted the Soviets will attempt to dominate the world "by means short of war."

Nixon, who spent one day in the Soviet Union, said the economic picture is somewhat brighter than he found it six years ago.

In his prepared speech, Nixon said Americans are developing

Esopus Stands to Gain New State Aid Formula Notes $31,397

The disclosure that the Town of Esopus could gain as much as $31,397 in increased State Aid in 1966 was made at the meeting of the Esopus Town Board Wednesday, night at the Town Hall, Port Ewen.

A letter was read from the State Commission on State-Local Fiscal Relations headed by former Lieutenant Governor Frank C. Moore. Under a plan now before the State Legislature, the present State Aid formula would be revised to mirror the relationship between population and the full valuation of properties lying within the boundaries of the municipality.

Such a formula would be of particular benefit to a town such as Esopus which has a large number of tax-exempt religious

Suffering, Losses Increase by Day

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Murky, debris-littered water from the swollen Mississippi River churned through low-lying areas of four states today, leaving thousands homeless.

Minnesota's river communities braced for their wettest Easter weekend in history as the U.S. Weather Bureau raised its crest forecasts for the river below St. Paul.

Record crests were predicted by weather experts in Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin. Communities in Illinois, on the Mississippi, and in North Dakota, on the Red River of the North, also prepared for flood conditions.

Red Cross Figures

The Red Cross gave these statistics for Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota:

Ten dead, 187 injured or ill, 35 hospitalized, 7 dwellings destroyed, 3,402 farm buildings destroyed, 3,953 families suffered loss, and 50,052 persons given aid.

Meanwhile, killer tornadoes made their second attack of the week on the nation.

At least four tornadoes did a hop-skip-and-jump through eastern Tennessee Thursday, killing two persons, injuring 50 and forcing 200 from their homes.

One tornado smashed into a trailer camp in Cleveland, Tenn., sending 50 persons to hospitals. Four of the injured were in serious condition. The twister upset 55 trailers.

Rescue workers pulled screaming victims from the debris.

Officials said 21 small airplanes at the Cleveland airport were damaged and three hangars were destroyed. Damage to the facility was placed at $200,000. One plane was carried two blocks and dropped on the trailer park.

May Be 5 Days

Joseph Strub of the Weather Bureau in Minnesota, said the Mississippi crest might remain at its high mark for three to five days before receding.

Record crests on the Mississippi are due late today in Minneapolis and St. Paul. The Minneapolis crest is set at 21 feet, 5 feet over flood stage, and the St. Paul crest at 27 feet, 13 feet beyond bankful levels.

No major business districts of either city are threatened, but several industrial areas are, or will be, waterbound.

The outpouring of water and ice from the St. Croix River along the Minnesota-Wisconsin border resulted in crest forecasts one to two feet higher than earlier estimates.

Snowplows were called out to Elk River, northwest of Minneapolis when the Mississippi heaved ice chunks onto U.S. 10.

Beef Up Dikes

The Minnesota River retreated slowly and the Crow River crested at flooded Delano and Rockford west of Minneapolis, after wide areas were under water.

The Mississippi strained against plywood extensions added to the St. Paul's Dike system, but they were holding. Dirt and sandbags were being added in strategic locations.

To Take Formal Step for Mid-Hudson Regional Planning During Next Week

The first formal step leading to regional planning for the Mid-Hudson area will be taken next week when a Steering Committee will be asked to adopt a certificate of incorporation and bylaws for the Mid-Hudson Pattern for Progress Inc., the proposed planning, research and development organization.

Dr. William J. Haggerty, president of the State University College, New Paltz, and Lelan F. Sillin Jr., president and chief executive officer of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp., who called the meeting, said the session was scheduled for a luncheon meeting Saturday, April 24 at the SUC College campus at New Paltz. Sillins and Dr. Haggerty were sponsors of the Pattern for Progress on regional planning last December 5 at the college.

Among area residents serving on the 31-member Steering Committee are Dr. Haggerty and Jay Le Fevre, former congressman, New Paltz; Herbert L. Shultz, president of the Rodie Coal Co.; Richard M. Kalish, president, Kingston Hospital Board of Trustees; Edwin T. Strong, vice-president, Central Hudson G & E Corp., and George E. Yerry, president, Building Trades Council, all of Kingston, and J. Constant VanRijn, president, Rotron Manufacturing Company and Benjamin L. Webster, Woodstock.

Other Kingstonians among the 22 prominent area residents invited to attend the Steering Committee meeting are Dr. Dale B. Lake, president, Ulster County Community College; Mrs. Vincent G. Connelly; Dr. W. Wendell Hoover, superintendent of schools and George W. Tamke, IBM plant manager.

Dr. Haggerty and Sillin said that the bylaws were designed to achieve the objectives outlined at the December Pattern for Progress Conference, to provide for broad participation by individuals and organizations from the seven-county Mid-Hudson region, and to encourage close cooperation with governmental officials and agencies.

Memberships are proposed in four classifications: 1) individual, 2) educational-labor-civic-charitable-religious, 3) business-industrial-professional, and 4) governmental. Each member would be entitled to one vote regardless of his class of membership.

The organization, they said, is being established to encourage balanced plans and programs for the economic development of the region, the enhancement of scenic and historic values and the conservation and wise use of the natural resources of the Mid-Hudson area.

The bylaws and certificate of incorporation were drafted by Dr. Haggerty; Sillin; Carl J. Mays, orange County Planning Director; Carl M. Beery, president, Marine Midland National Bank of Southeastern New York, and Dr. James F. Hall, president, Dutchess Community College.

As chairman of the finance subcommittee, Beery will make a progress report and offer recommendations for financing the proposed planning organization. His committee has been examining formulas and methods for raising $150,000 or more annually, the amount necessary for the operation of the organization.

Other members of the Steering Committee, composed of representatives of the seven counties, as Esopus which has a large number of tax-exempt religious institution properties located in the township.

Under the proposed formula, only one other township in Ulster County—Saugerties—would receive more in increased State Aid than Esopus.

In 1964, the Town of Esopus received $23,419 in State Aid for general municipal purposes and $4,672 in aid for highway purposes. As of April 1, 1965, an interim plan for aid will provide for an increase of $15,173. In 1966, if the proposed plan should be approved and based on the recently completed special census of the township, Esopus' State Aid for general municipal purposes would go to $55,095. Highway aid would also be increased by $4,393 for a combined increase of $31,397 (Continued on Page 8, Col. 6)

In his prepared speech, Nixon said Americans are developing

"a healthy skepticism about the usefulness of big government in modern society."

He said "scholars are discovering, sometimes to their surprise and consternation, that big government has rolled up an impressive record of failure."

As examples of failures, he cited the agriculture program and the federal urban renewal program. He said federal urban renewal has "clumsily destroyed more low-cost housing than it created" while private enterprise "quietly dwarfed its meager accomplishments."

Esopus Stands to Gain New State Aid Formula Notes $31,397

The disclosure that the Town of Esopus could gain as much as $31,397 in increased State aid in 1966 was made at the meeting of the Esopus Town Board, Wednesday, night at the Town Hall, Port Ewen.

A letter was read from the State Commission on State-Local Fiscal Relations headed by former Lieutenant Governor Frank C. Moore. Under a plan now before the State Legislature, the present State aid formula would be revised to mirror the relationship between population and the full valuation of properties lying within the boundaries of the municipality.

Such a formula would be of particular benefit to a town such as Esopus which has a large number of tax-exempt religious

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Murky, debris-littered water from the swollen Mississippi River churned through low-lying areas of four states today, leaving thousands homeless.

Minnesota's river communities braced for their wettest Easter weekend in history as the U.S. Weather Bureau raised its crest forecasts for the river below St. Paul.

Record crests were predicted by weather experts in Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin. Communities in Illinois, on the Mississippi, and in North Dakota, on the Red River of the North, also prepared for flood conditions.

Red Cross Figures

The Red Cross gave these statistics for Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota: Ten dead, 187 injured or ill, 35 hospitalized, 7 dwellings destroyed, 3,402 dwellings damaged, 25 farm buildings destroyed, 5,953 families suffered loss, and 50,052 persons given aid.

Meanwhile, killer tornadoes made their second attack of the week on the nation.

At least four tornadoes did a hop-skip-and-jump through eastern Tennessee Thursday, killing two persons, injuring 50 and forcing 200 from their homes.

One tornado smashed into a trailer camp in Cleveland, Tenn., sending 50 persons to hospitals. Four of the injured were in serious condition. The twister upset 55 trailers.

Rescue workers pulled screaming victims from the debris.

Officials said 21 small airplanes at the Cleveland airport were damaged and three hangars were destroyed. Damage to the facility was placed at $200,000. One plane was carried two blocks and dropped on the trailer park.

May Be 5 Days

Joseph Strub of the Weather Bureau in Minneapolis, said the Mississippi crest might remain at its high mark for three to five days before receding.

Record crests on the Mississippi are due late today in Minneapolis and St. Paul. The Minneapolis crest is set at 21 feet, 5 feet over flood stage, and the St. Paul crest at 27 feet, 13 feet beyond bankful levels.

No major business districts of either city are threatened, but several industrial areas are, or will be, waterbound.

The outpouring of water and ice from the St. Croix River along the Minnesota-Wisconsin border resulted in crest forecasts one to two feet higher than earlier estimates.

Snowplows were called out at Elk River, northwest of Minneapolis when the Mississippi heaved ice chunks onto U.S. 10.

Beef Up Dikes

The Minnesota River retreated slowly and the Crow River crested at flooded Delano and Rockford, west of Minneapolis, after wide areas were under water.

The Mississippi strained against plywood extensions added to the St. Paul's Dike system, but they were holding. Dirt and sandbags were being added in strategic locations.

Seven thousand books are now available to member libraries in a new and useful way, Leon Karpel, director of Mid-Hudson Libraries, announced. Mid-Hudson Libraries, the system with 50 member public libraries in Dutchess, Putnam, Ulster, Columbia and Greene Counties, has published a book catalog with author, title, and subject indexes, which will be sent to each member library for use by the public.

The book catalog is a reproduction of catalog cards, in book form, as distinct from the usual card catalog, with cards filed in drawers. Mid-Hudson Libraries has published the book catalog to make known the availability of a special collection of non-fiction books purchased by New York State and owned by Mid-Hudson Libraries. The collection is housed in the Adriance Memorial Library, Poughkeepsie, and is interfiled in Adriance's non-fiction collection.

$200 Investment
Now $25-Million
Coast Operation

By JAMES BACON

AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Martin Ransohoff's office at MGM is a tycoon suite, befitting his $25-million-a-year operation.

But behind the big desk sits a tieless Ransohoff looking less like a tycoon than anyone in town.

Among Most Dynamic

Often on the sets of his movies, the 36-year-old Ransohoff is mistaken for a third assistant director or some other hireling. But he is among the most dynamic and successful of all movie and television producers.

In 1954 he invested $200 and started Filmways, Inc., making TV commercials.

This year he is paying Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton better than a million dollars each to co-star in "The Sandpiper."

On television, his four shows are consistently in the top ten—"The Beverly Hillbillies," "Peticoat Junction," "Mr. Ed" and "The Addams Family." Next year he'll have two more—"O'Brien" with Peter Falk and "Country Cousins."

In the movies, he is currently making "The Cincinnati Kid" with Steve McQueen and Ann Margaret. He has just finished "The Loved One," based on Evelyn Waugh's devastating satire on big cemeteries. Two more of his products are "The Americanization of Emily" and "Topkapi."

Small Organization

"I guess you could call us a studio within a studio, but we do it all with a small organization; we only have five executives," says Ransohoff.

Ransohoff gets along well with his stars, but he can be forceful. He once fired one of Hollywood's top directors because he didn't like what he saw in the early rushes.

Whereas, it took a lifetime to make "Cleopatra" with the Burtons, Ransohoff brought "The Sandpiper" in on schedule and close to budget.

"I found Elizabeth very professional," says Ransohoff. "The only days she missed shooting were because I ordered her to stay in her hotel for a couple of days to lick a virus. 'She wanted to work.'"

First Three Shad Caught

Louis J. Turck, of 50 North Street, reported the first catch of shad this season in the Kingston area of the Hudson River Thursday. He netted three buck shad between 1 and 2 p. m. and expects far better results when he and other area fishermen start drifts next week.

Special Tactic for Suit Hand

By JACOBY & SON

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
What do you do when you use intermediate jump overcalls and pick up a really strong one suit hand such as South's?

You shouldn't double. Your partner just might happen to leave the double in and your hand is most unsuitable for defense against an adverse contract. Or your opponents would have a chance to bid at a low level and find their way to a good contract of their own. Another possible bad result would occur if your partner happened to get into the act at a high level in a suit of his own.

The best bid with today's South hand is an immediate four-heart overcall. You only have nine playing tricks and may not get a trick from your partner. In that case you will be down one. That might be a bad result and again it might not. For all you know if your partner has a really bad hand your opponents may be able to romp into four spades and make it. If this wouldn't happen today, it might some other time.

Your partner has the spades and his king of clubs is a trick for you so you can chalk up four hearts with 100 honors. Would anything bad happen to you if you made a takeout double? Not necessarily, but you can't tell. West might decide to try an immediate diamond raise and he and East might then go to five diamonds. You could double and beat them two tricks if you defended properly but that would not make up for your loss of game.

Even worse might happen if your partner got carried away with his six card spade suit and went to four spades. Then you would have to go down one at five hearts.

LONDON (AP)—London television watchers seem to prefer white rhinos to pop singers.

As an experiment, commercial ITV in the London area started showing at peak time Thursdays (7:30 to 8 p. m.) a program series on the presentation of wild

Impressed With Kingston

Editor, The Freeman,

On behalf of all Drum and Bugle Corps, and my own KINGSMEN in particular, that appeared at the Recent Preview of Corps Sounds, I'd like to thank the beautiful City of Kingston, New York for the hospitality shown the visiting units.

The 700 Drum Corps boys and girls that recently visited your city were most impressed by the friendliness of your citizens and by the beauty of your area.

We hope it will be our pleasure to again be invited to entertain at Kingston. We look forward to the warmth and good feelings already exhibited.

The Kingston Daily Freeman, is to be congratulated too, on its support of youth, scouting and corps activity. Your support is comforting at a time when many newspapers ignore the better aspects of youth.

Thanks again,

Yours in Youth

Youth for Christ Stages Easter Choral Concert

The Fort Wayne Bible College Choral will present the Youth for Christ Easter concert at the Grace Community Church, Neighborhood Road, Lake Katrine Saturday 7:45 p. m.

In an announcement made by Tom Lint, YFC director, he noted that the 45-voice chorale is on eastern tour from Fort Wayne, Ind. through five states presenting 20 services.

A high point for the chorale will be a visit to the World's Fair on opening day, April 21.

KINGSTON NEW YORK, APRIL 16, 1965

HUMANE SLAUGHTERING

U. S. Senator Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania has introduced legislation to protect animals submitted for laboratory experiments from needless, inhuman treatment.

Area residents who seek to curb the abuses which are rife in the important field of animal experimentation have requested The Freeman to remind readers, who are interested, to write their senators in support of the bill.

Senator Clark says there is no need for a country as idealistic as the United States to condone the suffering which great numbers of these animals undergo before they die. This needless suffering does nothing to advance science or human welfare.

This bill would not prohibit vivisection. It would not outlaw or curtail scientific research which is responsibly and humanely conducted. It aims to do no more than to minimize needless, wanton suffering. It provides machinery for reporting and inspection designed to assure decent care of animals awaiting experimental treatment, anesthetization when this would not interfere with an experiment, and prompt dispatch of a dying animal to avoid unnecessary agony when the experiment has been completed.

Thousands of people living today would either be dead or suffering intensely from an incurable disease if it were not for our friends—the animals. The unsung hero of our age has been the animal of science. The phenomenal advances made in surgery and the quality of medical care we are receiving today are in large measure due to the contribution of animals serving in the army of medicine.

Medical and scientific research must continue for the benefit of man's health and happiness. But is it necessary to use cruel practices?

Last year a similar bill died in committee because animal dealers who opposed the measure showed more interest than those who would like the bill passed.

Interested persons should write U. S. Senator Javits and U. S. Senator Kennedy at Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

TORNADIC STORMS

Probably no form of nature gone wild inspires so much fear as the tornado.

Though tornadic storms are usually limited in extent and duration, they are unlimited in the explosive havoc they can cause. It is this, together with the unpredictability of their courses, that creates the sense of human helplessness we associate with these wild winds.

The storm system that battered six mid-western states was a big one by any measure, however. Spawning some 37 tornadoes and 50 less severe storms, it killed more people than have died annually in tornadoes in the past half century.

But while the toll of nearly 250 ranks it as one of the major disasters of its kind, it is still exceeded by the storm that flailed a 219-mile-long path of death through Missouri, Indiana and Illinois in March 1925, killing 689 persons.

When we think of the increase in population that has taken place in these and other states in the past 40 years (and no state is exempt from tornadoes), we wonder that there have not been worse disasters.

It is not all a matter of luck. Though man has no way of controlling tornadoes, even in theory, he is not entirely helpless. Every year storm forecasting becomes more accurate, more rapid.

How many lives have been saved over the years by the U. S. Weather Bureau's Severe Local Storm Forecasting Center in Kansas City, Mo., it is impossible to say. Certainly the death toll on April 11 would have been higher without warnings issued from this and other weather centers.

This, of course, is scant comfort to those who lost loved ones on that Black Sunday. For some who died, the warnings came too late, or not at all, or went unheeded.

For the survivors, there now begins the long process of rebuilding homes and lives, with whatever help the rest of us can give them.

'These Days'

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

"IT COULDN'T BE WIRTZ" — OR COULD IT? When it comes to intellectual arrogance, Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has compiled a few new highs in demonstrating that he has his own good share of it.

Having gone out on a limb by banishing imported labor from the fruit groves and vegetable farms of Florida, Arizona and California, Mr. Wirtz was caught out by events. As might have been predicted by anyone who knows the difference between country and city labor, the unemployed in California and Florida cities failed to respond to the call for "stoop" labor. But instead of listening to the pleas of anguished farmers who saw their lemons rotting and their plantings of lettuce going to waste, Wirtz let himself be hornswoggled into a sort of reverse Potemkin village tour through California's farmlands. Visiting the farm labor camps that are maintained by the most unfeeling of the independent labor contractors (and there are some such in California), Wirtz took the worst conditions for an "average" and announced to the world that his decision to outlaw "braceros" from Mexico must be allowed to stand. Ventura County lemon growers report that he was unbearably rude to their representatives; he brushed off their statistical demonstration that a big percentage of "winos" and common criminals had been recruited to replace the braceros in their groves and had deserted to run up the crime rates in nearby towns such as Oxnard.

The Wirtz show of bravado was strictly for the headlines, however. Behind the scenes he had already begun to back down. In Florida, where British West Indians have traditionally been imported to pick the crops, there was a moment of truth coming up when annual contracts for the employment of 10,000 migratory foreign workers had to be renewed or new native farm laborers had to be found to replace them.

Since Florida is represented in Washington by two Democratic Senators, Smathers and Holland, the tip from the White House that Wirtz was "on his own" in meeting the Florida emergency could have only one meaning: enough of the West Indians would be re-hired to get the Florida crops picked. Bowing to exigencies, Secretary Wirtz agreed to let 6,000 West Indians stay on after April 15. But he did this without any show of humility, and he hung grimly — for the moment, at least — to his adamant stand vis-a-vis California, which is represented in Washington by two Republican Senators, Kuchel and Murphy.

"It couldn't be Wirtz," so they cracked lugubriously in California about Wirtz's public statements of "no more braceros" that were put out in late March and early April. But meanwhile Wirtz, without admitting that he had been wrong, had relaxed a bit to accommodate the date palm farmers of the Palm Desert region to the east of Mount San Jacinto. A hundred or so Japanese workers who have been in the U.S. on a permit were certified to the date palm grove owners to help polinize the 1965-66 date crop. This was an absolute necessity, for the unemployed from California cities had failed to volunteer to climb swaying fifty-foot ladders to do the hand work that is required in date fertilization.

Meanwhile, the California weather had turned rainy and cold, postponing the "moment of truth" when something would have to be done to provide workers to harvest crops in the Salinas Valley and elsewhere. Democratic Governor Pat Brown, who had sided with Wirtz originally but who had since changed his mind after contemplating the possible ruin of California's crops for 1965, begged behind the scenes for some softening at the Department of Labor in Washington. And Republican Senator Murphy did his best to get Democratic Senator Smathers of Florida to plead California's case at the White House.

As this column is being written, it is a virtual certainty that Secretary Wirtz will have a virtual rounce some relief for California. But there has been no show of graciousness, no intellectual humility, in the Secretary's performance throughout the winter and early spring. This columnist likes a man who, when events go against his theories, is willing to say publicly, "I was wrong." But will Wirtz do it? Or will Californians be compelled to say once more, this time with no intention of punning, "It couldn't be Wirtz." (Copyright, 1965, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The Doctor's Mailbag

Bad Breath Problems

Can Have Many Causes

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.,
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—My husband has been troubled with bad breath for about 2 years. What can he do for it?

A—Bad breath has many causes. Infected teeth and gums can usually be discovered and corrected easily. Low grade infections in the nasal sinuses and tonsils are a common cause and are often hard to clear up. Bronchiectasis, a chronic disease deep in the lungs, is associated with the production of foul sputum and is even harder to cure without operation.

Some drugs taken regularly will cause bad breath, so if your husband is taking medicines of any kind, he should stop them all for a week or 10 days and see whether there is any improvement.

Recently a doctor in Washington, D. C., found that many patients with halitosis, who did not fit into any of the above categories, had chronically dry mouths due to nervous tension. This is akin to the bad taste in the mouth sometimes noticeable on getting up in the morning. A more relaxed mode of living and taking a small drink of water several times during the day will cure this condition.

Q—My ankles become swollen after I have been on my feet for several hours. There is no swelling when I get up in the morning. What could cause this and what can I do for it?

A—Edema (swelling) of the ankles may be caused by a leaky heart valve, a diet that contains too much salt, or too little protein, or a pelvic cancer (prostatic in men and uterine or ovarian in women), kidney disease, severe anemia, phlebitis, or varicose veins. The treatment would depend on the cause.

Q—Is it possible to catch hepatitis from treatments with an electric needle if the same needle, though sterilized, is used on different persons?

A—Yes, if the method used for sterilization is inadequate. Greater heat for a longer period is required to kill the hepatitis virus than for most other disease germs—dry heat at 320 degrees for at least an hour or boiling for at least 15 minutes.

Q—Are personality traits inherited?

A—Not in the true meaning of the word. They may run in the family because children imitate the gestures, vocal inflections and attitudes of their parents and other close associates.

Q—Will hair rinses to cover graying cause the hair to fall out faster?

A—No.

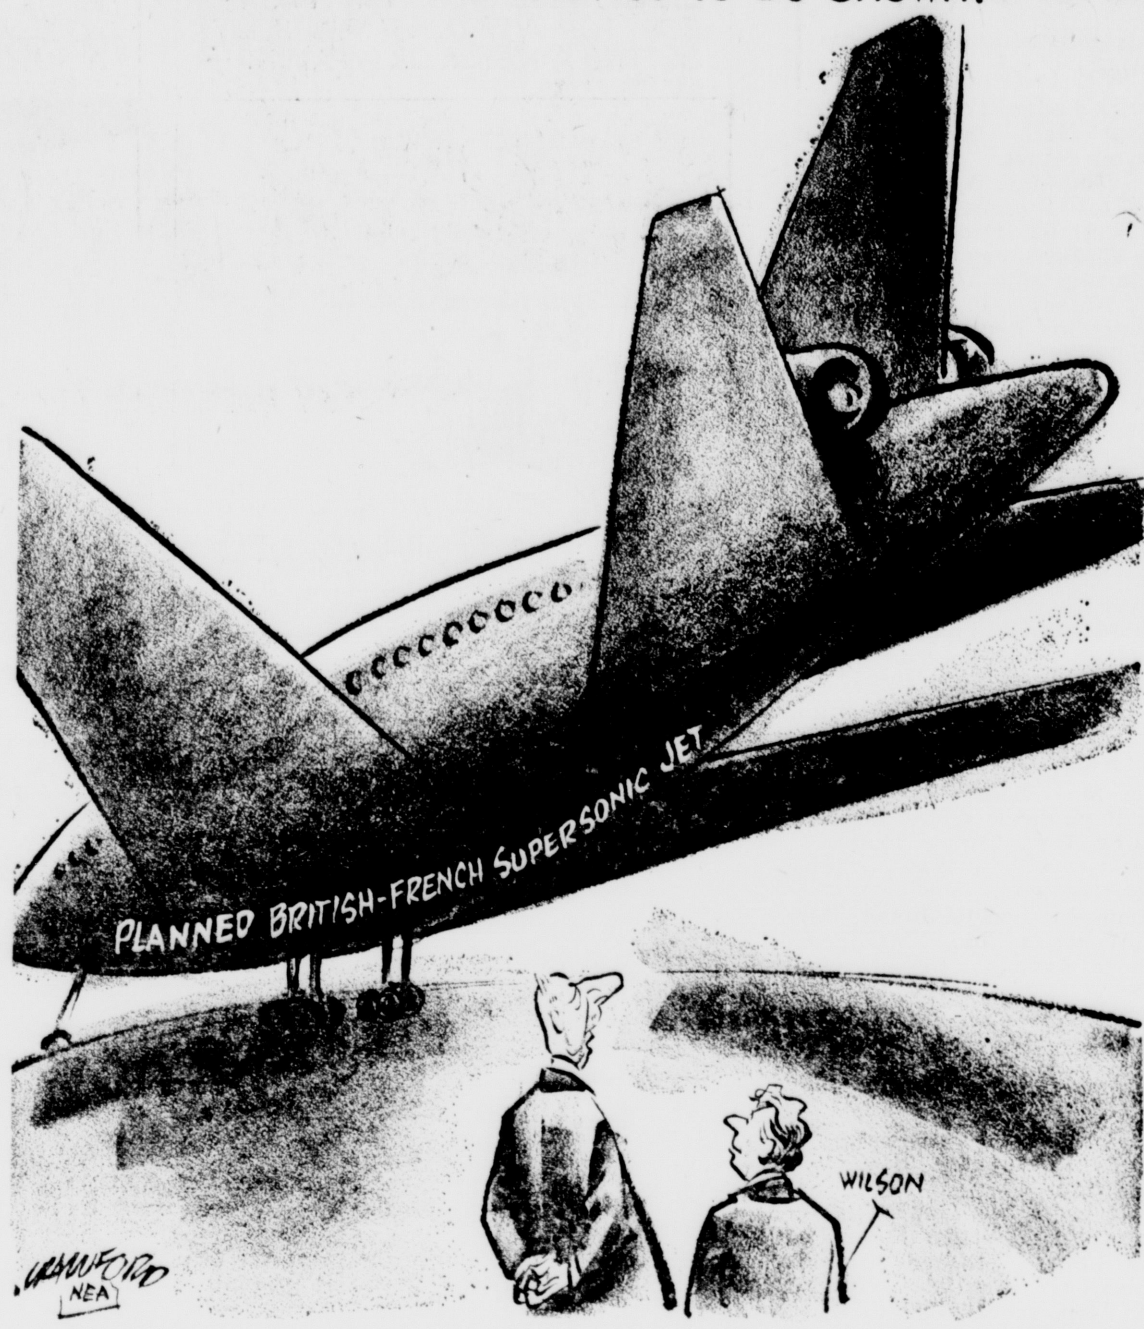

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of The Kingston Daily Freeman. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

CHECK YOUR CAR

There is only one thing to do with a faulty car—drive it to a repair shop immediately—advises the New York State Motor Vehicle Department.

In your car-care program, have a reliable mechanic check your car twice a year and have it checked promptly if there is a mechanical change. Each week personally check your tires, horn, windshield wiper blades and lights. Checking your car frequently helps keep it in good condition.

WASHINGTON — (NEA) —

Some U.S. officials are pressing that this month's Red harassment of West Berlin be followed by U.S.-Allied-West German pressure on the East Germans.

They're discussing:

Stepped-up Allied military patrols on the autobahn between West Germany and Berlin.

Increased Allied military patrols in East Berlin.

Added restrictions on travel by East German citizens in North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries.

Tightened controls on Allied and West German commerce with East Germany, trade on which the East Germans have become highly dependent. The Red Germans import $250 million worth of goods from West Germany a year, including sizable amounts of essential fertilizer.

ONE GROUP IN THE government wants to step in with one of these restrictions within weeks after the end of the Red harassment.

These let's-do-something officials contend that unless there's Western action, there'll be continued harassments. They hold that the only way the Communists can be discouraged is to hit back every time they act up over Berlin.

Another group of officials wants to go more slowly. Instead of acting, they want to send a follow-up note some time after the end of the Red harassment, saying that this isn't the way to do business and hinting obliquely that if the Communists act up again this way we'll respond with one or another of these trade-patrol-travel actions.

But already there are signs from Paris and London that the French and British will wash their hands of any after-the-harassment action. The way the cards read now, they won't even sit still for a post-harassment hint of later retaliatory action.

Instead, the British, French and some American officials will push for another tack:

1. Let well enough alone vis-a-vis the Reds and Berlin and be glad they pushed no further.

2. Discourage the West Germans from having any more national meetings in West Berlin (because these agitate the Reds).

NO DECISION ON what path to follow has yet been made except to hold on to U.S.-Allied rights in Berlin and its access routes. The don't-rock-the-boat group is gaining, however.

There's a strong feeling in the government as of now that the United States has enough on its hands with Viet Nam and that it wouldn't be smart to do anything at this time that could give the Reds an excuse for stirring up more trouble in Europe.

These officials are ignoring new government-sponsored studies which indicate that unless Red treaty infractions are followed quickly and determinedly with some effective action, the Communists normally go on to further treaty-breaking.

The Sympathizer was relaxed. This was his usual state. He leaned back in the chair at Sam's barbershop on Federal Highway and he sighed and said: "God takes care of me and suckers, but me first." Sam looked at the face. It reminded him of a pop-sicle melting down the stick. Or a wax candle, half burned.

"Yes," he said, spreading the cloth and flipping the old hairs from it. "God sure takes care of you, Simpy." The Sympathizer had no admiration for anyone who referred to him by a diminution of his proper name, but he had a superior desire not to offend a man with a razor.

"What do you wish today, Mr. S?"

"The works. Hair trim. Facial. Hot towel. Nose hairs. Ear hairs. Shave. Manicure. Shoe shine. A little talcum and some hair tonic. Don't use the machine on the sides."

Sam sighed. Such a waste of money. "Yes," the Sympathizer said. "God takes care of me and suckers. Today is getaway day at Gulfstream." Sam nodded. "I thought you would be at the Florida Derby." The Sympathizer smiled forgivingly. "What for? I'm going to make money on that thing no matter how it comes out. I don't even have to be there to collect."

The Sympathizer always had schemes. Sam could see, by looking in the mirror, that The Sympathizer also had two large holes in his shoes, but as a race track tout, he seemed to have no matching holes in his head. For many years, The Sympathizer had played the horses and, having found that they are unplayable, he began to play the people who play the horses.

He developed a bedside manner. It wasn't easy, because The Sympathizer hated people and loved horses. He learned to weep with the losers, laugh with the winners, and comfort the should-of-bettors. He had more inside information than the track veterinary. None of it was legitimate, but then, neither were the suckers. The goal was always the same—separate the mark from the outer edge of his heart, namely the wallet.

The Sympathizer closed his eyes and permitted himself a one-reel dream. This had been a disastrous meet for him. He had come away from Hialeah with a little moolah, but he had blown it at Joe Doria's place, drinking and setting them up for the very suckers he had fleeced.

"How you gonna win on the Florida Derby?" Sam said, running the scissors up and down the back of The Sympathizer's dirty head. "I mean, if I'm not being personal." The Sympathizer

Humphrey Talk to Editors Has Political Overtones

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Vice-President Humphrey yesterday made to the American Society of Newspaper Editors a long speech with plenty of political overtones in it. There was nobody on the program to present a rebuttal—but it really wasn't necessary. For the editors are knowledgeable people, and they know the other side of the arguments the Vice-President made.

Mr. Humphrey, for example, in answer to a question, insisted that the Administration is not opposed to literacy tests, but merely to their abuses. Yet the pending voting-rights bill would, in effect, abolish in several states their present laws governing voting qualifications and leave it to the Attorney General of the United States to prescribe what should or shouldn't be the qualifications for registering to vote.

There is nothing in the Constitution, of course, which gives any agency of the Federal government the right to pass laws for the states. The Fifteenth Amendment does forbid any state to abridge the right to vote by reason of race or color, but the existing provisions of the Federal Constitution do not say a state can lose its right to legislate on the subject or to be governed thereafter by the whims of Department of Justice officials or Civil Service registrars.

Mr. Humphrey took the position that there has been discrimination under literacy laws. This is, of course, conceded. The proposed statute, however, would not only punish the states by forbidding them to use any of their past literacy tests—even if they parallel those of Northern states—but would put certain Southern states on probation for a period of ten years. It would not necessarily relieve them of this penalty even if they made their statutes conform to the objectives of the Fifteenth Amendment itself.

Mr. Humphrey discussed the economic situation as a whole and spoke of it in glowing terms. He said, for instance:

"We will continue to forge a strong economy unmarked by recessions. We will continue to search for and develop tools to overcome the so-called 'business cycle.'"

But throughout his entire speech—which was optimistic if not virtually a promise of Utopian conditions—Mr. Humphrey didn't say a word about the financial position of the United States government in the world today. Many tragic occurrences in history point to the fact that a nation which year after year spends more than it takes in gradually depletes its own currency and forces up the cost of living. The Vice-President, however, seemed to think there is no crisis in American fiscal affairs. He said:

"Today this nation is no longer under threat of deep depression, of revolution, of near fatal division. There is no great domestic economic crisis goading us into action. There are no breadlines."

Yet not long ago President Johnson was telling Congress of the terrible state of poverty existing in many regions of the country and why the Federal government simply had to appropriate more money to wage a war on poverty. The idea conveyed was that millions of American citizens do not have enough food to eat.

The Vice-President's speech was like many others being made by Administration spokesmen. They give the impression that Americans have had virtually no educational program heretofore, that nothing has been done to improve the conditions of the masses of the people and that now for the first time the American people are really going to become educated and attain some degree of well being.

Mr. Humphrey spoke in praise of the New Deal program of the Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who died 20 years ago this week. A depression of worldwide proportions had struck the nation's economy in the 1930's, and the unemployment figures rose to percentages and numbers never before known. But all the subsidies and all the appropriations made by the government for relief and in aid of the unemployed did not remedy the fundamental conditions. It was not until World War II broke out in 1939 and European nations began to make large purchases of arms and other supplies from this country that unemployment was substantially reduced and the United States started back toward a satisfactory economic position.

Mr. Humphrey did make reference to the indifference of the United States in the 1920's to the plight of Europe, and he was right when he said that the American government did not in those days perceive the importance of "foreign aid" and hence the whole world suffered as a consequence.

The Humphrey speech was an interesting example of the political motif of all the Administration's speeches nowadays — to give the impression that the country not only is prosperous but is going to continue so indefinitely. The assumption during the prosperity of the 1920's was also that there never would be another recession or depression—but events turned out the other way.

er sighed. "I thought you'd never ask," he said. "I am, at the moment, tapped out and I can't get up to Garden State on them shoes."

"So, the last few weeks, I set up a few brand new marks at the ten dollar window. I gave 'em nothing. Just talked friendly. Told 'em inside stories of great races. We exchanged names and stuff. I must of met each one four times. We got real pal. Those guys are my insurance money north. This morning, I gave each one of them a different horse in the Florida Derby."

Sam hid the sagging face behind a steaming towel. "That's an old dodge, Mr. S. 'From a little hole in the towel came wisdom. 'The old ones the best, Sam. They work. Depends on how you work the mark up. He must have confidence in you. I phoned each one of these men, and told him I wouldn't call him except that I just talked to the stable boy, and the horse was ready and more than ready. He...could...not...lose."

"So no matter which one wins, Mr. S., you call the one who's got the winner after the race and remind him that you gave him the tip. Right?" He rubbed the towel in the face and threw it in to a hamper. "That's crude," said The Sympathizer. "I told each one that I was tapped out, and to please bet a few bob for me. They figure I wouldn't ask a man to do that unless I knew something."

"The race should be going on in a few minutes," Sam said. "Excuse me." He turned the radio up. The Sympathizer was getting his shoes back when the voice of Joe Tannenbaum came on with the running story of a great race. The horses were Selari, Gallant Lad, Louis Arnold, Sparkling Johnny, Hall-to-All, Gummo, Battle Star, Flyalong and Native Charger.

The Sympathizer listened with little interest. "God," he intoned, "takes care of me and suckers." Sam said Shh. Native Charger nosed Hall-to-All at the wire and paid $6.80 for $2. The Sympathizer got out of the chair sleek and smelly and consulted a little book. "George Carmody," he said softly. "I gave him Native Charger." He paid the bill and waited until the evening to phone.

"Hello," he said. "This is The Sympathizer. Well, didn't I tell you Native Charger would take the Derby? You must have made a fistful. The voice at the other end was distant. "I didn't bet on the race. You see, I forgot that each time we met I was in a sports shirt. I realize now that you never really knew me. On Saturdays, I hear confessions...." KINGSTON NEW YORK, APRIL 16, 1963

U. S. Senator Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania has introduced legislation to protect animals submitted for laboratory experiments from needless, inhuman treatment.

Area residents who seek to curb the abuses which are rife in the important field of animal experimentation have requested The Freeman to remind readers, who are interested, to write their senators in support of the bill.

Senator Clark says there is no need for a country as idealistic as the United States to condone the suffering which great numbers of these animals undergo before they die. This needless suffering does nothing to advance science or human welfare.

This bill would not prohibit vivisection. It would not outlaw or curtail scientific research which is responsibly and humanely conducted. It aims to do no more than to minimize needless, wanton suffering. It provides machinery for reporting and inspection designed to assure decent care of animals awaiting experimental treatment, anesthetization when this would not interfere with an experiment, and prompt dispatch of a dying animal to avoid unnecessary agony when the experiment has been completed.

Thousands of people living today would either be dead or suffering intensely from an incurable disease if it were not for our friends—the animals. The unsung hero of our age has been the animal of science. The phenomenal advances made in surgery and the quality of medical care we are receiving today are in large measure due to the contribution of animals serving in the army of medicine.

Medical and scientific research must continue for the benefit of man's health and happiness. But is it necessary to use cruel practices?

Last year a similar bill died in committee because animal dealers who opposed the measure showed more interest than those who would like the bill passed.

Interested persons should write U. S. Senator Javits and U. S. Senator Kennedy at Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

TORNADIC STORMS

Probably no form of nature gone wild inspires so much fear as the tornado.

Though tornadic storms are usually limited in extent and duration, they are unlimited in the explosive havoc they can cause. It is this, together with the unpredictability of their courses, that creates the sense of human helplessness we associate with these wild winds.

The storm system that battered six mid-western states was a big one by any measure, however. Spawning some 37 tornadoes and 50 less severe storms, it killed more people than have died annually in tornadoes in the past half century.

But while the toll of nearly 250 ranks it as one of the major disasters of its kind, it is still exceeded by the storm that flailed a 219-mile-long path of death through Missouri, Indiana and Illinois in March 1925, killing 689 persons.

When we think of the increase in population that has taken place in these and other states in the past 40 years (and no state is exempt from tornadoes), we wonder that there have not been worse disasters.

It is not all a matter of luck. Though man has no way of controlling tornadoes, even in theory, he is not entirely helpless. Every year storm forecasting becomes more accurate, more rapid.

How many lives have been saved over the years by the U. S. Weather Bureau's Severe Local Storm Forecasting Center in Kansas City, Mo., it is impossible to say. Certainly the death toll on April 11 would have been higher without warnings issued from this and other weather centers.

This, of course, is scant comfort to those who lost loved ones on that Black Sunday. For some who died, the warnings came too late, or not at all, or went unheeded.

For the survivors, there now begins the long process of rebuilding homes and lives, with whatever help the rest of us can give them.

'These Days'

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

"IT COULDN'T BE WIRTZ" — OR COULD IT?

When it comes to intellectual arrogance, Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has compiled a few new highs in demonstrating that he has his own good share of it.

Having gone out on a limb by banishing imported labor from the fruit groves and vegetable farms of Florida, Arizona and California, Mr. Wirtz was caught out by events. As might have been predicted by anyone who knows the difference between country and city labor, the unemployed in California and Florida cities failed to respond to the call for "stoop" labor. But instead of listening to the pleas of anguished farmers who saw their lemons rotting and their plantings of lettuce going to waste, Wirtz let himself be hornswoggled into a sort of reverse Potemkin village tour through California's farmlands. Visiting the farm labor camps that are maintained by the most unfeeling of the independent labor contractors (and there are some such in California), Wirtz took the worst conditions for an "average" and announced to the world that his decision to outlaw "braceros" from Mexico must be altered to stand. Ventura County lemon growers report that he was unbearably rude to their representatives; he brushed off their statistical demonstration that a big percentage of "winos" and common criminals had been recruited to replace the braceros in their groves and had deserted to run up the crime rates in nearby towns such as Oxnard.

The Wirtz show of bravado was strictly for the headlines, however. Behind the scenes he had already begun to back down. In Florida, where British West Indians have traditionally been imported to pick the crops, there was a moment of truth coming up when annual contracts for the employment of 10,000 migratory foreign workers had to be renewed or new native farm laborers had to be found to replace them.

Since Florida is represented in Washington by two Democratic Senators, Smathers and Holland, the tip from the White House that Wirtz was "on his own" in meeting the Florida emergency could have only one meaning: enough of the West Indians would be re-hired to get the Florida crops picked. Bowing to exigencies, Secretary Wirtz agreed to let 6,000 West Indians stay after April 15. But he did this without any show of humility, and he hung grimly—for the moment, at least—to his adamant stand vis-à-vis California, which is represented in Washington by two Republican Senators, Kuchel and Murphy.

"It couldn't be Wirtz," so they cracked lugubriously in California about Wirtz's public statements of "no more braceros" that were put out in late March and early April. But meanwhile Wirtz, without admitting that he had been wrong, had relaxed a bit to accommodate the date palm farmers of the Palm Desert region to the east of Mount San Jacinto. A hundred or so Japanese workers who have been in the U. S. on a permit were certified to the date palm grove owners to help pollinate the 1963-64 date crop. This was an absolute necessity, for the unemployed from California cities had failed to volunteer to climb swaying fifty-foot ladders to do the hand work that is required in date fertilization.

Meanwhile, the California weather had turned rainy and cold, postponing the "moment of truth" when something would have to be done to provide workers to harvest crops in the Salinas Valley and elsewhere. Democratic Governor Pat Brown, who had sided with Wirtz originally but who had since changed his mind after contemplating the possible ruin of California's crops for 1965, begged behind the scenes for some softening at the Department of Labor in Washington. And Republican Senator Murphy did his best to get Democratic Senator Smathers of Florida to plead California's case at the White House.

As this column is being written, it is a virtual certainty that Secretary Wirtz will have to announce some relief for California. But there has been no show of graciousness, no intellectual humility, in the Secretary's performance throughout the Winter and early Spring. This columnist likes a man who, when events go against his theories, is willing to say publicly, "I was wrong." But will Wirtz do it? Or will Californians be compelled to say once more, this time with no intention of punning, "It couldn't be Wirtz." (Copyright, 1963, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Bad Breath Problems

Can Have Many Causes

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—My husband has been troubled with bad breath for about 2 years. What can he do for it?

A—Bad breath has many causes. Infected teeth and gums can usually be discovered and corrected easily. Low grade infections in the nasal sinuses and tonsils are a common cause and are often hard to clear up. Bronchiectasis, a chronic disease deep in the lungs, is associated with the production of foul sputum and is even harder to cure without operation.

Some drugs taken regularly will cause bad breath so, if your husband is taking medicines of any kind, he should stop them all for a week or 10 days and see whether there is any improvement.

Recently a doctor in Washington, D. C., found that many patients with halitosis, who did not fit into any of the above categories, had chronically dry mouths due to nervous tension. This is akin to the bad taste in the mouth sometimes noticeable on getting up in the morning. A more relaxed mode of living and taking a small drink of water several times during the day will cure this condition.

Q—My ankles become swollen after I have been on my feet for several hours. There is no swelling when I get up in the morning. What could cause this and what can I do for it?

A—Edema (swelling) of the ankles may be caused by a leaky heart valve, a diet that contains too much salt or too little protein, or a pelvic cancer (metastatic in men and uterine or ovarian in women), kidney disease, severe anemia, phlebitis, or varicose veins. The treatment would depend on the cause.

Q—Is it possible to catch hepatitis from treatments with an electric needle if the same needle, though sterilized, is used on different persons?

A—Yes, if the method used for sterilization is inadequate. Greater heat for a longer period is required to kill the hepatitis virus than for most other disease germs—dry heat at 320 degrees for at least an hour or boiling for at least 15 minutes.

Q—Are personality traits inherited?

A—Not in the true meaning of the word. They may run in the family because children imitate the gestures, vocal inflections and attitudes of their parents and other close associates.

Q—Will hair rinses to cover graying cause the hair to fall out faster?

A—No.

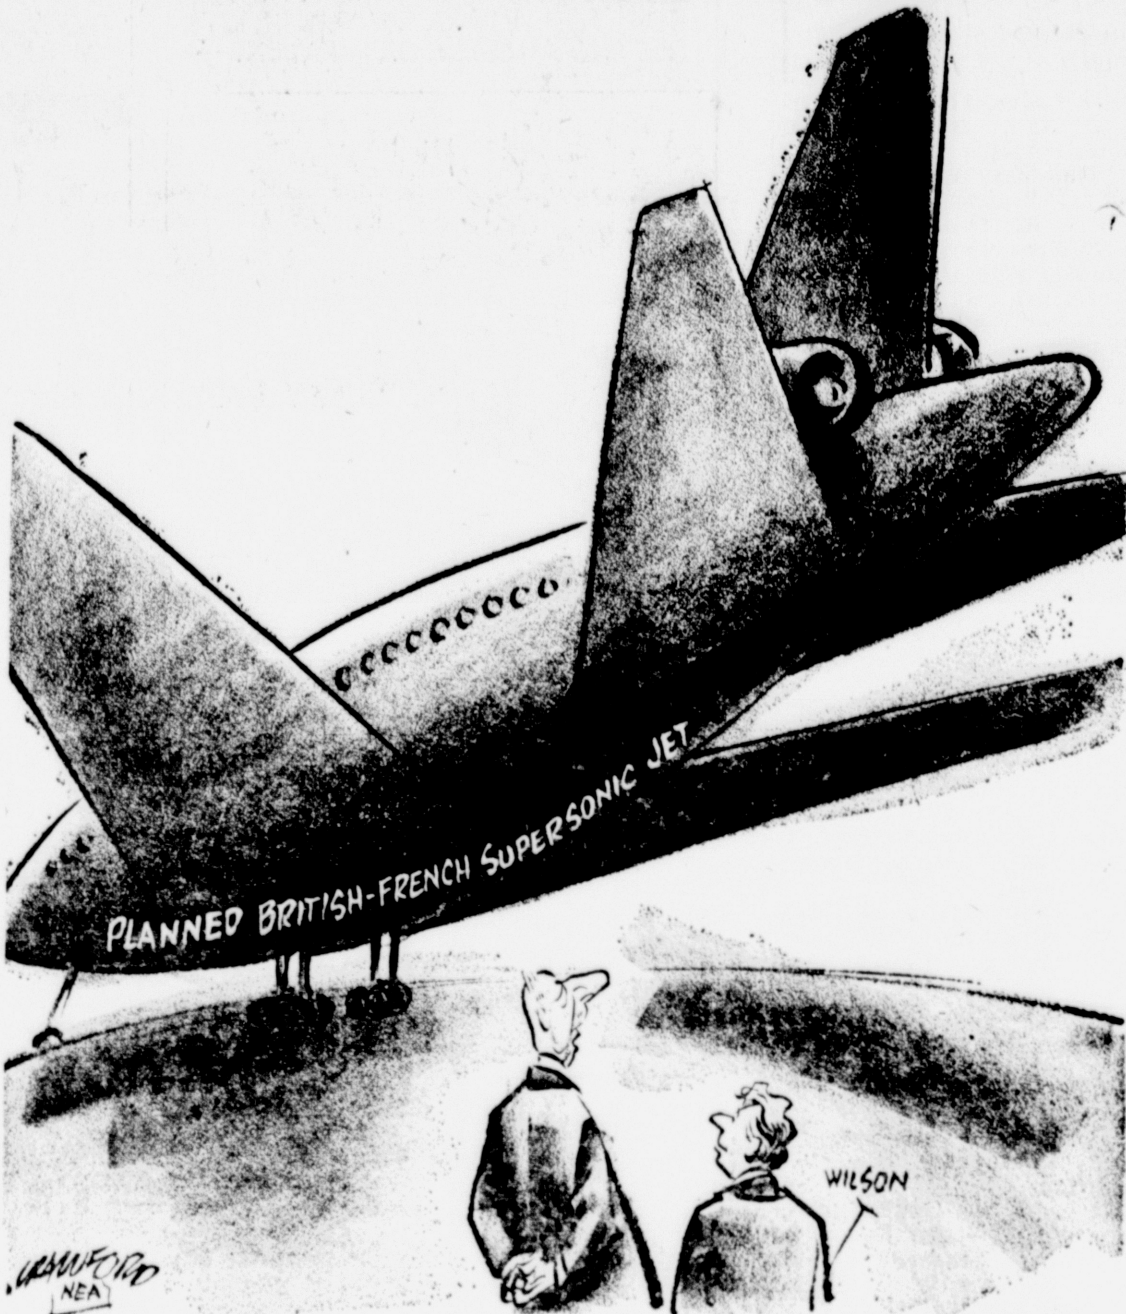

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of The Kingston Daily Freeman. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

The Sympathizer was relaxed. This was his usual state. He leaned back in the chair at Sam's barbershop on Federal Highway and he sighed and said: "God takes care of me and suckers, but me first." Sam looked at the face. It reminded him of a pop-sicle melting down the stick. Or a wax candle, half burned.

"Yes," he said, spreading the cloth and flipping the old hairs from it. "God sure takes care of you, Simpy. The Sympathizer had no admiration for anyone who referred to him by a diminution of his proper name, but he had a superior desire not to offend a man with a razor. "What do you wish today, Mr. S.?"

"The works. Hair trim. Facial. Hot towel. Nose hairs. Ear hairs. Shave. Manicure. Shoe shine. A little talcum and some hair tonic. Don't use the machine on the sides."

Sam sighed. Such a waste of money. "Yes," the Sympathizer said, "God takes care of me and suckers. Today is getaway day at Gulfstream." Sam nodded. "I thought you would be at the Florida Derby." The Sympathizer smiled forgivingly. "What for? I'm going to make money on that thing no matter how it comes out. I don't even have to be there to collect."

The Sympathizer always had schemes. Sam could see, by looking in the mirror, that The Sympathizer also had two large holes in his shoes, but as a race track tout, he seemed to have no matching holes in his head. For many years, The Sympathizer had played the horses and, having found that they are unplayable, he began to play the people who play the horses.

He developed a bedside manner. It wasn't easy, because The Sympathizer hated people and loved horses. He learned to weep with the losers, laugh with the winners, and comfort the should-of-bettors. He had more inside information than the track veterinarian. None of it was legitimate, but then, neither were the suckers. The goal was always the same—separate the mark from the outer edge of his heart, namely the wallet.

The Sympathizer closed his eyes and permitted himself a one-reel dream. This had been a disastrous meet for him. He had come away from Hialeah with a little moolah, but he had blown it at Joe Doria's place, drinking and setting them up for the very suckers he had fleeced. "How you gonna win on the Florida Derby?" Sam said, running the scissors up and down the back of The Sympathizer's dirty head. "I mean, if I'm not being personal." The Sympathizer er sighed. "I thought you'd never ask," he said. "I am, at the moment, tapped out and I can't get up to Garden State on them shoes."

"So, the last few weeks, I set up a few brand new marks at the ten dollar window. I gave 'em nothing. Just talked friendly. Told 'em inside stories of great races. We exchanged names and stuff. I must of met each one four times. We got real pally. Those guys are my insurance money north. This morning I gave each one of them a different horse in the Florida Derby."

Sam hid the sagging face behind a steaming towel. "That's an old dodge, Mr. S. 'From a little hole in the towel come wisdom. 'The old ones the best, Sam. They work. Depends on how you work the mark up. He must have confidence in you. I phoned each one of these men, and told him I wouldn't call him except that I just talked to the stable boy, and the horse was ready and more than ready. He...could...not...lose."

"So no matter which one wins, Mr. S., you call the one who's got the winner after the race and remind him that you gave him the tip. Right?" He rubbed the towel in the face and threw it in to a hamper. "That's crude," said The Sympathizer. "I told each one that I was tapped out, and to please bet a few bob for me. They figure I wouldn't ask a man to do that unless I knew something."

"The race should be going on in a few minutes," Sam said. "Excuse me." He turned the radio up. The Sympathizer was getting his shoes back when the voice of Joe Tannenbaum came on with the running story of a great race. The horses were Seinar, Gallant Lad, Louis Arnold, Sparkling Johnny, Hail-to-All, Caumery, Battle Star, Flyalong and Native Charger.

The Sympathizer listened with little interest. "God," he intoned, "takes care of me and suckers." Sam said Shh. Native Charger nosed Hail-to-All at the wire and paid $6.80 for $2. The Sympathizer got out of the chair sleek and smelly and consulted a little book. "George Carmody," he said softly. "I gave him Native Charger." He paid the bill and waited until the evening to phone.

"Hello," he said. "This is The Sympathizer. Well, didn't I tell you Native Charger would take the Derby? You must have made a fearful bet. The voice at the other end was distant. "I didn't bet on the race. You see, I forgot that each time we met I was in a sports shirt. I realize now that you never really knew me. On Saturdays, I hear confessions...." FAMILY REUNION

LOOK AGAIN — With winter's hibernation ending, an enterprising cameraman induced three men to pose in sewer pipes to produce an illusory effect at Salem, Ore.

Plans Paying Off To Hem in Flood Waters of River

By RON SPEER

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — When the mighty Mississippi River ravaged Dubuque 13 years ago city officials vowed they would never be caught off guard again.

They immediately drew up plans to hem in the river the next time it went on a rampage. Those plans have paid off as an even higher crest than in the 1952 flood heads for this north-east Iowa city of 57,000.

A crest of 24 feet is expected next Friday and preparations for the highest water in history are nearly completed.

A dike four to eight feet high has been thrown up to protect northern sections of the city. There is no way to prevent flood waters from covering low industrial and business areas in south Dubuque.

Plans have been made to evacuate families living in low areas of Dubuque and across the river in East Dubuque, Ill.

Preparations also are under way at Iowa river cities downstream.

At Clinton, a state of emergency has been declared. Volunteers have started erecting a mile-long dike 1½ to 3 feet high.

An estimated 50,000 sand bags will be needed to complete the dike, which Mayor Harold Denala says will be finished by April 23, three days before the river is expected to crest.

Boy Scout executive Don Winter says nearly 1,000 Boy Scouts in Clinton can be mobilized in about 30 minutes if needed.

About 2,000 persons are expected to leave their homes in the Davenport-Rock Island area before the river crests there April 26.

Girl Scouts in Davenport are making surveys of the needs of families who will be moving out. Sixty thousand sand bags have been delivered to Davenport.

At Keokuk, where the Mississippi River leaves Iowa after more than 300 miles of meandering around the state's border, three industrial plants, employing more than 1,000 persons, have closed because of high water and the crest is not expected for two weeks.

PLAN HEART MEETING—Board members planning the annual meeting of the Ulster County Heart Association include (l-r) George R. Sullivan, Woodstock; Dr. Jeremiah Sachs, Kingston and Kenneth Mitchell, Ellenville. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Vincent G. Connelly, Kingston and Mrs. Rowena Haviland, Highland. The annual meeting is scheduled for May 26 at the Gov. Clinton Hotel. Awards will be given and board members elected at that time. Invitations will be mailed shortly.

Today's Services To Memorialize Victims of Flood

By JOHN F. WHEELER

BLUFFTON, Ohio (AP) — The traditional Good Friday service here will, instead, serve as a memorial to six victims of the savage Palm Sunday tornado.

Bluffton buries the last of its tornado dead today, then holds the special memorial service.

The last funeral is for 80-year-old Adrian Pifer and his wife, Leota, 75.

Services for others of the state's 54 dead, meanwhile, are continuing.

Two were buried Thursday in Toledo.

At nearby Cairo, 2-year-old Scotty Imms and his infant brother, Andrew, blown out of a car and into a creek, were buried.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Imms, did not attend. Both are hospitalized; she is in poor condition.

The last of the dead of Pittsfield, the crossroads community where nine of fifty perished, also will be buried today.

Services are scheduled for the town's grocer, Louis Klier, 51. His son, Donald, a part-time ambulance driver, rushed to Pittsfield Sunday night to help and found his father among the victims.

Memorial services at Pittsfield were discarded so the cleanup pace would not be slowed.

At Columbus, the Red Cross announced it will provide Good Friday and Easter Sunday transportation for evacuees across the state.

Attorney's View on Assistance in Home for Police

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A policeman has the right to ask for a citizen's assistance in making an arrest in a public place, contends an attorney, but not in a private home.

Attorney Herald P. Fahringer Jr. argued in City Court Thursday that the request was unconstitutional when made in a private residence. It violates one's rights to privacy in his home, Fahringer said. Fahringer moved for dismissal of a misdemeanor charge against 40-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Taylor.

Police said Mrs. Taylor refused to assist them March 25 in serving a search warrant on an upstairs tenant in a two-family house where she lived. The tenant, police said, was suspected of bookmaking.

Police said they entered her first-floor apartment and requested her aid. They said she ordered them to leave after she found they did not have a search warrant for her place.

Judge Joseph Sedita of City Court heard the arguments and adjourned the case to May 14.

DO YOU TAKE VITAMINS AND STILL FEEL TIRED?

If you take vitamins and still feel tired, your trouble may be due to iron-poor blood. Vitamins alone can't build up iron-poor blood. But GERITOL can! Because just two GERITOL tablets, or two tablespoons of liquid GERITOL, contain 7 vitamins plus twice the iron in 1-lb. of calves' liver.

In only one day GERITOL-iron is in your bloodstream beginning to carry strength and energy to every part of your body. Check with your doctor and if you've been feeling tired because of iron-poor blood, take GERITOL, liquid or tablets, every day. You'll feel stronger fast in just 7 days or money back from GERITOL.

"Praying" rather than "praying" is a more accurate name for the mantis, an insect belonging to the Mantid family. Because of the position of its front legs and its raised head it appears to be "praying." The so-called "praying mantis" has also been called "Devil's horse" in America because of its voracious and pugnacious habits in attacking and devouring other insects and even its own kind.

Expect U. S. to Tell Soon About German Unity Stand

By ENDRE MARTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is expected to tell the world soon that it insists on the right of the Germans to move toward peaceful reunification by their own free choice.

This restatement of the U.S. position will probably come in form of a major policy speech by a top figure of the administration, authoritative sources reported.

Such a speech might replace a three - power declaration, suggested by the Germans, to remind the Soviets of their responsibility toward Germany.

Bonn would temporarily be satisfied with a joint declaration by the United States, Britain and France. The West German government originally asked for a "new initiative," an effort to revive the dormant question of reunification.

Willy Brandt, mayor of West Berlin and head of the opposition Social Democratic party, sided with Chancellor Ludwig Erhard in urging Washington to make such a step, possibly on May 8, the 20th anniversary of Nazi Germany's surrender in World War II.

The United States, informants said, agreed to this plan and the British government is known to be sympathetic to it. There was, however, no response from Paris as yet.

American officials do not conceal their annoyance over the French delay, but say they have no reason to doubt that France ultimately will consent. If not, the appeal will be made unilaterally, in form of a top-level speech.

The same officials privately expressed doubts about the wisdom of the timing as suggested by the Germans. It is questionable, they say, that such a step should be associated in any way with Nazi Germany's defeat.

Brandt, who leaves Washington today after three days of meetings, told a news conference Thursday that "in connection with May 8 — not necessarily on that day, but perhaps around that day — something positive should be stated on behalf of the Western Alliance and — or the individual Western states."

The mayor said: "We know that a large Communist propaganda is under preparation pointing back to the past. We think it is necessary to say something which points into the future."

No Posse Planned For Missing Feline

While Easter egg hunts are planned in several communities of the area this weekend, many Dutchess County residents got off to an early start today—not looking for eggs but a Persian cat that was imported from France.

Town of Poughkeepsie Police Lieut. John Brown received a call last night from J. M. Percheron, of Dutchess County, South Road, a foreign student at the IBM, Percheron reported his Persian cat missing, and he said the cat was worth $2,000.

Area radio newscasters elaborated on the missing cat this morning, and since town police have been busy answering telephone calls from residents, who thought they saw the missing feline, which the owner said is gray with orange eyes.

The reason for the interest in the missing cat is that Percheron has offered a $50 reward for the return of his pet.

At a later hour this forenoon the missing cat had not been found, and police said they had no idea of forming a posse to scout around for the animal.

Pakistan, U.S. Sign

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan and the United States signed an agreement today for an American loan of $8.7 million for railway development in East Pakistan.

River Areas . . .

out of the St. Paul area.

Water reached one of four industrial areas in Minneapolis. Bridges were patrolled to guard against ice jams. Dozens of highways and many bridges were blocked.

Gov. Karl Rolvaag has estimated Minnesota flood damage at $23 million.

An erroneous report in Iowa that $2 an hour would be paid to flood workers caused some embarrassment.

"Somebody called the schools and said they would pay $2 an hour," said Mayor Harold Domsalla of Clinton, Iowa. "Now you ask for volunteers and they look at you like you were crazy."

In Wisconsin, Mississippi floodwaters will push past 1952's all-time high of 15.3 feet today at La Crosse and as one resident put it: "We'll find out whether our new dikes are any good."

Floods put three municipal sewage treatment plants out of operation, more roads were closed and 100 families were evacuated at Prairie du Chien, Wis., where an 18.1-foot stage is predicted today, going to 19.8 by Sunday.

Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois ordered 60 members of the National Guard to check levees along a 10-mile stretch of the Mississippi. The river was expected to crest today at 23 feet in Hannibal, Mo.

The body of 14-year-old Eddie Heard was found Thursday amidst rubble of Dunlap, Ind., only half a block from where President Johnson had toured the ruins Wednesday.

Indiana's death toll in the tornadoes on Palm Sunday was raised to 130 with the death of a woman who had been injured.

Rochester Town Planners Hear Variety of Topics

A code of ethics for planning board members, executive sessions, and a list of proposed town ordinances were discussed at this week's meeting of the Town of Rochester Planning Board held at Accord Fire Hall.

Members attending were Edward C. Carle, Samuel Reavin, Howard Terwilliger and Winston Van Kl-eck. In the absence of the chairman, Reavin, vice chairman, presided.

A proposed code of ethics, drafted by John W. Scribano, chairman for Planning Board members, was read and discussed. It was decided to table this matter at present for further discussion and study.

There was also some discussion on whether or not the public should be excluded from certain Planning Board meetings, so that more work could be accomplished. It was agreed that the public should be kept informed, that exclusion was undesirable, but that perhaps additional "working meetings" might be set. Further study on this will also be made.

Consideration was given to a list of proposed town ordinances by Joseph Babiarz. It was agreed that some of the points raised by his letter were well-taken and should be acted upon but that since a professional study by Brown & Anthony, was being started, no immediate action should be recommended to the Town Board without consulting Dr. Anthony.

Reavin asked for further consideration of the proposed building which had been purchased by the town. He felt that since the Planning Board had made a study recommending this purchase, it should take whatever steps it could toward putting this building into use. A committee was formed to consult with the Town Board, make a further study, and attempt to put the building to use.

Ulster Adds 29 Books to Library

The Town of Ulster announced today that 29 new books have been received and are available at the library in the Chambers School.

Meanwhile, library officials announced that in connection with National Library Week beginning April 25, books overdue will be accepted free of fines so that all patrons with books on loan can return them. With the change in hours over the Easter recess, they pointed out, some patrons may not be able to call at the library at their convenience.

Officials also announced that next week is the period for entries in the library Art Contest to be brought to the Chambers School location. The entries will be judged Friday, April 30 and be on public display May 1 and 2 in the Chambers School gymnasium.

The new books:

Juvenile fiction, Arabian Nights; Ironclads of the Civil War by American Heritage Jr. Library; Forts in America, Petersen; The Universe of Galileo and Newton, Binby; Contemporary Math, Clark; Children's Festivals from Many Lands, Nina Millen; All About Five, Holden.

Adult non-fiction, The Age of the Reformation, P. Navy Announces New Program for College Training

Recognition of college training for students who for some reason are unable to continue on their higher educational level, has been given a prominent place in a newly-established Navy program, it was announced today.

Chief Petty Officer William Keaton, Navy recruiter at the Kingston office said that the special program was initiated for college or junior college men who due to financial or other personal reasons are unable to continue their education or are required to "take a break" from school. He said that a college or junior college student may qualify in either ways for the program, depending upon education and background.

Keaton said the plan operates thusly:

If a candidate completed two years of college or junior college or has over 50 semester hours and can qualify physically and mentally, he can be enlisted two pay grades higher than someone with no college training. This automatically places him one year ahead of non-college men for promotion purposes plus a substantial increase in pay.

If the candidate has completed only one year of college or junior college and/or has at least 20 semester hours and can qualify physically and mentally he will be offered an enlistment program one pay grade higher than a person with no college training. This pay grade places the candidate six months ahead of non-college men for promotion purposes plus an increase in pay.

The candidate who qualifies will receive a guarantee of a technical school in a field of his choice before he enlists. The fields of electronics, airman, hospital, polaris, and nuclear study are available.

Expect U.S. to Tell Soon About German Unity Stand

By ENDRE MARTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is expected to tell the world soon that it insists on the right of the Germans to move toward peaceful reunification by their own free choice.

This restatement of the U.S. position will probably come in form of a major policy speech by a top figure of the administration, authoritative sources reported.

Such a speech might replace a three-power declaration, suggested by the Germans, to remind the Soviets of their responsibility toward Germany.

Bonn would temporarily be satisfied with a joint declaration by the United States, Britain and France. The West German government originally asked for a "new initiative," an effort to revive the dormant question of reunification.

Willy Brandt, mayor of West Berlin and head of the opposition Social Democratic party, sided with Chancellor Ludwig Erhard in urging Washington to make such a step, possibly on May 8, the 20th anniversary of Nazi Germany's surrender in World War II.

The United States, informants said, agreed to this plan and the British government is known to be sympathetic to it. There was, however, no response from Paris as yet.

American officials do not conceal their annoyance over the French delay, but say they have no reason to doubt that France ultimately will consent. If not, the appeal will be made unilaterally, in form of a top-level speech.

The same officials privately expressed doubts about the wisdom of the timing as suggested by the Germans. It is questionable, they say, that such a step should be associated in any way with Nazi Germany's defeat.

Brandt, who leaves Washington today after three days of meetings, told a news conference Thursday that "in connection with May 8 — not necessarily on that day, but perhaps around that day — something positive should be stated on behalf of the Western Alliance and — or the individual Western states."

The mayor said: "We know that a large Communist propaganda is under preparation pointing back to the past. We think it is necessary to say something which points into the future."

Rochester Town Planners Hear Variety of Topics

A code of ethics for planning board members, executive sessions, and a list of proposed town ordinances were discussed at this week's meeting of the Town of Rochester Planning Board held at Accord Fire Hall.

Members attending were Edward C. Carle, Samuel Reavin, Howard Terwilliger and Winston Van Kleeck. In the absence of the chairman, Reavin, vice chairman, presided.

A proposed code of ethics, drafted by John W. Scribano, chairman for Planning Board members, was read and discussed. It was decided to table this matter at present for further discussion and study.

There was also some discussion on whether or not the public should be excluded from certain Planning Board meetings, so that more work could be accomplished. It was agreed that the public should be kept informed, but that perhaps additional "working meetings" might be set. Further study on this will also be made.

Consideration was given to a list of proposed town ordinances by Joseph Babiarz. It was agreed that some of the points raised by his letter were well-taken and should be acted upon but that since a professional study by Brown & Anthony, was being started, no immediate action should be recommended to the Town Board, without consulting Dr. Anthony.

Reavin asked for further consideration of the proposed building which had been purchased by the town. He felt that since the Planning Board had made a study recommending this purchase, it should take whatever steps it could toward putting this building into use. A committee was formed to consult with the Town Board, make a further study, and attempt to put the building to use.

Navy Announces New Program for College Training

Recognition of college training for students who for some reason are unable to continue on their higher educational level, has been given a prominent place in a newly-established Navy program, it was announced today.

Chief Petty Officer William Keaton, Navy recruiter at the Kingston office said that the special program was initiated for college or junior college men who due to financial or other personal reasons are unable to continue their education or are required to "take a break" from school. He said that a college or junior college student may qualify in either ways for the program, depending upon education and background.

Keaton said the plan operates thusly:

If a candidate completed two years of college or junior college or has over 30 semester hours and can qualify physically and mentally, he can be enlisted two pay grades higher than someone with no college training. This automatically places him one year ahead of non college men for promotion purposes plus a substantial increase in pay.

If the candidate has completed only one year of college or junior college and/or has at least 20 semester hours and can qualify physically and mentally he will be offered an enlistment program one pay grade higher than a person with no college training. This pay grade places the candidate six months ahead of non college men for promotion purposes plus an increase in pay.

The candidate who qualifies will receive a guarantee of a technical school in a field of his choice before he enlists. The fields of electronics, airman, hospital, polaris, and nuclear study are available.

Look to Cambodia Parley As Viet Peace Talk Route

By LEWIS GULICK
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Britain are eyeing a proposed conference on Cambodia as a possible channel for peace talks on Viet Nam.

President Johnson and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson discussed the prospects Thursday. Both U.S. and British sources said later the diplomatic picture will have to clear some before they can decide whether such a conference would be worthwhile.

Southeast Asia mixed with economics on Wilson's agenda as the British Laborite leader stopped in Washington for a day en route home from a speech-making trip to New York. It was his second visit here since becoming prime minister last October.

Meeting separately with Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler and Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, Wilson expounded his views on expanding commerce and forming a more flexible international payments system.

Callaghan Coming

U.S. sources said Fowler's British counterpart, Chancellor of the Exchequer James Callaghan, is being invited here in June for further talks. Wilson was reported encouraged over prospects of developing an international monetary system which puts less pressure on the dollar and the pound.

The political side of the international scene got the most attention during a one-hour Johnson-Wilson meeting at the White House, followed by a luncheon with administration and congressional leaders. Secretary of State Dean Rusk and British Minister of State George Thomson sat in.

Praises Speech

Wilson lavished praise on Johnson's April 7 speech declaring U. S. determination to defend South Viet Nam and offering unconditional peace discussions and $1 billion toward Southeast Asian economic development.

He indicated to newsmen that Britain is in no position to boost its present small economic aid to Saigon because of its heavy commitments in nearby Malaysia under Indonesian attack, and in Middle East peace-keeping.

Must Give Thought

The Cambodian proposal, he added, will have to be scrutinized "at our leisure. I don't think we can reach a conclusion on it today."

Other informants said Wilson wants to be sure a Cambodian conference would be successful before Britain would endorse it. His former foreign secretary, Patrick Gordon Walker, is now in Asia sounding out sentiment.

U.S. sources gave this outline of the situation: Cambodia, a neighbor of Viet Nam, renewed last month its old proposal for a conference of the 1954 Geneva-Indochina agreement powers with the aim of getting guarantees for Cambodia's neutrality and security.

Since the Geneva powers are also the same nations — East and West — which deal with Viet Nam, a meeting on Cambodia could easily get into talks on Viet Nam. The Reds have spurned Johnson's offer to talk peace and a proposal by 17 neutralist nations for negotiations, but they have endorsed the Cambodian initiative.

Wilson lavished praise on Johnson's April 7 speech declaring U. S. determination to defend South Viet Nam and offering unconditional peace discussions and $1 billion toward Southeast Asian economic development.

He indicated to newsmen that Britain is in no position to boost its present small economic aid to Saigon because of its heavy commitments in nearby Malaysia, under Indonesian attack, and in Middle East peace-keeping.

Must Give Thought

The Cambodian proposal, he added, will have to be scrutinized "at our leisure. I don't think we can reach a conclusion on it today."

Other informants said Wilson wants to be sure a Cambodian conference would be successful before Britain would endorse it. His former foreign secretary, Patrick Gordon Walker, is now in Asia sounding out sentiment.

U.S. sources gave this outline of the situation: Cambodia, a neighbor of Viet Nam, renewed last month its old proposal for a conference of the 1954 Geneva-Indochina agreement powers with the aim of getting guarantees for Cambodia's neutrality and security.

Since the Geneva powers are also the same nations — East and West — which deal with Viet Nam, a meeting on Cambodia could easily get into talks on Viet Nam. The Reds have scorned Johnson's offer to talk peace and a proposal by 17 neutralist nations for negotiations, but they have endorsed the Cambodian initiative.

Firemen, Police, DPW Sign for Career Plans

A statement released today by spokesmen for three organizations representing city employees emphasizes unity of action in the effort to gain career plans and other pay raises.

Members of the police and fire departments have been active in seeking career incentive plans and other employees have asked for pay raises.

The Common Council's finance committee, headed by Council Majority Leader John Machione (R) 12th Ward, has been studying pay-raise proposals and means of obtaining tax revenue other than from real estate.

The fire board, meanwhile, has supported the career plan for firemen with the proposal that it start in the department by July 3. The Common Council voted recently to hear details of that action.

The statement today was from spokesmen of the Kingston Uniformed Fire Fighters Association, Local 461, the Kingston Patrolmen's Association and the Civil Service Employees Association of the Public Works Department, who met and "reaffirmed the unity of the groups in seeking the career and wage plans and in securing favorable action of these plans in the very near future."

Progress to date was discussed by the employees along with plans for continued action. They were "hopeful that action will soon be taken by the Common Council to implement the career plans and raises for the public works employees." The statement was signed by Floyd Finch, president of the firemen's group; John Crespi, president of the KPA; and Joseph McCordle, president of the CSEA.

Mayor John J. Schwenk, in a recent statement dealing with the fire department, proposed more extensive use of volunteer firemen to assist the paid department in solving its personnel problems.

150 Planes . . .

running into groundfire, the spokesman said.

Planes Return Safely

All the planes returned safely to Da Nang Air Base, he said.

Night raids against North Viet Nam began Wednesday when South Vietnamese bombers hit a military convoy and U.S. Navy planes ranged northward. The North Vietnamese newspaper Nhan Dan asserted that the United States has "taken another extremely dangerous step."

Viet Cong guerrillas killed all the dogs in the village of Mieu Dong, 7 miles south of Da Nang, possibly to prevent them from barking a warning if the Reds attempt an attack on the big U.S.-Vietnamese base.

Report Launching Pads

Reports reached Washington that launching pads for Russian anti-aircraft missiles are being built near Hanoi, the capital of North Viet Nam. U.S. sources in Washington said there is no evidence that Soviet missiles are in North Viet Nam, but it was assumed they would be sent once the pads are ready.

Washington officials also assume that Soviet personnel are in charge of the sites.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson returned to London today after talks in Washington with President Johnson on Viet Nam and other issues.

Thant Heartened

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General U Thant said he has found some recent developments in the Viet Nam war heartening.

Thant told a U.N. correspondent's luncheon President Johnson and North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong seem to agree on the need to return to the essentials of the 1954 Geneva agreements for a neutralized Viet Nam.

Thant said he had no plans to visit Peking or Hanoi. Red China said Monday Thant would not be welcome if he attempted a peace mission.

In New Delhi, Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri said the United States should call off its raids on North Viet Nam while efforts are made to start negotiations to end the war.

Protests Execution

North Viet Nam protested the execution of a Viet Cong terrorist by South Vietnamese authorities Thursday and said his death will increase anti-American moves in South Viet Nam. The terrorist had tried to bomb a hotel for U.S. service personnel in Da Nang.

Henry Cabot Lodge, former U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam, arrived in Honolulu en route to the Far East to bolster support for America's Viet Nam policy. President Johnson asked Lodge to make the mission and talk with leaders in Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Formosa, Japan and Korea.

Lodge goes first to New Zealand.

Scientists Gain Valuable Secrets About Leukemia

"Chromosomes, those tiny components of every living cell associated with heredity, are reluctantly divulging some of their secrets to persistent cancer research scientists interested in leukemia and the part played by chromosomes in this disease."

Part of $25,555 Grant

Speaking on chromosomes thusly, was Dr. Avery A. Sandberg, chief of the Medicine C Department at Roswell Park Memorial Institute, Buffalo. Dr. Sandberg and his associates, working on a grant of $25,555 from the American Cancer Society, have observed changes in the chromosome patterns in some patients suffering from leukemia.

This month is Cancer crusade month, and scores of volunteers are participating in a fund-raising campaign directed locally by the Ulster County Unit of the ACS.

Dr. Sandberg is one of several scientists sponsored by the ACS to study leukemia. Last year the society spent more than $2 million on research related to this disease.

Chromosomes are usually rod-shaped bodies seen under the microscope in the nucleus of a cell during the time the cell is undergoing division to form two cells. It is cell division, occurring thousands of times, which produces a living being from an original single cell and replaces the cells lost during normal living.

In their recent studies, Dr. Sandberg and his associates have observed several interesting occurrences in the chromosomal patterns of their leukemia patients:

(1) — Of 28 patients suffering from chronic myelocytic leukemia, 16 of them had an abnormal chromosome named "Philadelphia" chromosome.

"It was interesting to note," Dr. Sandberg said, "that the average age of those with the 'Philadelphia' chromosome was 52 years, while those not having the abnormal chromosome averaged 65 years of age. Those with the abnormal chromosome also responded better to the drugs used to control their diseases, while those without the 'Philadelphia' did not respond well to treatment."

Some Over 100

(2) — Some patients suffering from acute myeloblastic leukemia tended to have more chromosomes than the normal 46. Some of the cases observed had more than 100 chromosomes. The greater the amount of chromosomes the better was the response to therapy.

(3) — Some patients suffering from acute myeloblastic leukemia, except for a group of elderly patients, showed fewer chromosomes than the normal 46.

"Although we do not yet know the precise significance of these observations, they do help us to better understand some of the complexity of the cell and of the disease," Dr. Sandberg said. "The chromosomal changes in human leukemia can be used as definite diagnostic criteria, particularly in patients with chronic myelocytic leukemia, and can be of great help in following the therapeutic course of patients."

"For a definitive answer to the problem," Dr. Sandberg said, "we must devote more time and money so that we may probe even deeper into the mechanisms which control growth—both normal and abnormal."

Funds contributed by Ulster County residents toward the 1965 Cancer Crusade quota of the local unit of the ACS aid greatly in furthering the work of scientists at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute.

Some scientists say raccoons moisten their food because they have poor salivary glands.

Master Plan for College Esopus Stands

The master plan and preliminary data for Ulster Community College were delivered to the State University Architects office in Albany today.

This was announced by Dr. Dale B. Lake, president of the college, who said he and Augustus Schrowang Jr., delivered the materials and met briefly with Ellis Rowlands, State University Architect for Community Colleges.

Schrowang is of the architectural firm of Augustus Schrowang Associates, which prepared plans for the college to be built in Stone Ridge.

The total report presented to Albany consisted of 13 pages, copies of three College Trustees and Board of Supervisors resolutions, bird's eye photographs of the building complex, 16 pages of drawings, 4 pages of cubage and square footage diagrams, proposed outline specifications and cost to estimate for the first phase of construction.

The Ulster County Board of Supervisors at a meeting on April 8 adopted a resolution approving the college master plan and the five buildings to be included in the first phase of construction. Those five buildings will be the Macdonald DeWitt Library, science building, the business studies building, an all-purpose building and a residence for the college president. The first four buildings are to be financed by a $150,000 cash gift from College Trustee Macdonald DeWitt, by county funds and by matching state funds. The residence is to be financed by a cash pledge from College Trustee Macdonald DeWitt, plus any matching funds from the state of New York.

Schrowang Associates have completed a three dimensional model of the campus which is now on display in the County Office Building and which will be a part of the UCCC Exhibit in the forthcoming Lions Exposition. It is anticipated that the model will be placed on display at various places throughout Ulster County.

No Cause Verdict Is Returned on '63 Case

A no cause verdict was returned in County Court before County Judge Raymond J. Mino by the jury which heard the testimony in an action for assault brought by Hydreot S. Armstrong against Charles Carpio.

Plaintiff Armstrong alleged that he received a broken leg as the result of an altercation which took place outside a Broadway tavern on Dec. 28, 1963.

Armstrong brought an action against Charles Carpio, who in turn counterclaimed for assault. The jury returned a verdict of no case in both charges.

Plaintiff alleged he had gone to a tavern to see a tenant and collect rent. He alleged he was ordered to leave the tavern. Outside an altercation took place, according to testimony, and in the scuffle Armstrong suffered a broken leg.

Gaffney and Hill appeared for plaintiff and defendant, Carpio, was represented by Schick and Klein.

Thus far during the April term a total of 20 civil cases have been disposed of by Judge Mino, either through trial or other disposition.

Universities Clos

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Four universities were shut down for two weeks today as bloody clashes continued for the fourth day between police and thousands of students protesting government concessions to Japan.

Scores of students and 54 policemen were injured, 27 of them seriously, in one of the clashes with more than 6,000 rock-throwing demonstrators, police said.

Police arrested 475 persons, including 98 who were not students.

O'Loughlin, a former police justice in Endicott, was elected to the family court two years ago. He was active in Republican politics.

Sunny Easter Is Forecast

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — April showers are expected to stop long enough to give New Yorkers a moderately warm and largely sunny Easter.

The Weather Bureau today forecast temperatures in the 50s to around 60.

The forecast calls for showers to end in most areas tonight. Saturday will be mostly sunny with moderate temperatures in much of the eastern portion but rather cool in the western portion and east of Lake Ontario, the bureau said.

Wurts St. Man Charged; 2 Cars Found by Police

A local man was charged last night with petit larceny shortly after a 1949 sedan, reported stolen, was recovered, and a truck, also reported stolen last night, was recovered today.

A report at 10:32 p.m. noted the theft of a car owned by Henry Bunce, of 395 Foxhall Avenue, from near 10 Stuyvesant Street. It was reported recovered at 10:45 p.m., by officers Raymond Wells and Curtis VanDemark on Main Street.

Booked on the petit larceny charge was Alfred Smith, 24, of 1 Wurts Street. City court hearing was put over today until April 20.

A 1959 Chevrolet panel truck reported stolen last night from Drive-In Motors, 482 Albany Avenue, was recovered today near the state armory by officers George Dougherty and Charles Diers.

Truth Squad Is To See Hospitals

John Jenkins, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, today made known in Kansas City, Mo., the establishment of a "Truth Squad" to visit 32 Veterans Administration facilities scheduled for closing.

Three of the VA facilities are in New York State, and include the Castle Point Veterans Hospital near Beacon. Jenkins said the "Truth Squad" will report its findings to a special Blue Ribbon Committee appointed by President Johnson to look into the proposed closing of the VA facilities.

Meanwhile, John P. Battle, commander of the Beacon District American Veterans Post, said petitions containing signatures of 2,500 Beacon area residents, have been sent to President Johnson in protest to the planned hospital closings, and signers are still being sought for the petitions.

Commander Battle said he hailed a proposal from an independent study showing that the three VA hospitals in New York State can play a role as nursing homes for veterans. The commander said Castle Point has an ideal location for a nursing home care and added that the beautiful scenery along the Hudson River in the vicinity of the hospital in Southern Dutchess County can give these veterans an incentive to stay alive. It is completely different from staring at walls as would be the case in a hospital in a large city.

Approximately 400 beds are available at Castle Point, but only about 200 have been used for some time.

Water Plant Cited

Myers stated that Superintendent Harry A. Newson and Assistant Superintendent Harry B. Van Orner had recently been complimented by Harry F. Edinger, director of environmental sanitation of Ulster County Board of Health, on the smooth operation and good housekeeping practices at the new Hudson River water treatment plant.

A letter from Superintendent of Highways Paul Mercier requested the board take steps to increase the term of highway superintendent from two to four years. The board tabled the matter until it could receive additional information on the subject from Attorney for the Town, Charles H. Gaffney.

A letter was received from Mrs. William Granitto, St. Remy, thanking the board for providing the services of a town constable as a crossing guard for a series of story hour programs held at Port Ewen Library during the past winter. Mrs. Granitto praised Constable Floyd Baringer for the conscientious manner in which he performed his duties and assisted the children.

The board agreed to purchase additional filing cabinets for the town office and to install new book shelving.

Justice of the Peace Allan Dargie reported on a tree that had recently fallen in the Rifton cemetery and suggested that several other trees that appeared to be defective be examined and removed. The board agreed to obtain a price on their removal.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING...

Stocks With Good Yield Advised Near Retirement

Q) "My wife and I have saved $13,000. We have 100 Long Island Lighting and 30 General Telephone & Electronics. Is it a good idea to invest part of our savings in stocks that could bring some income when retirement comes? We are in our late 50's." —N. X.

A) Your present holdings are excellent and I believe you can invest more of your money in stocks—relatively stable issues that can not only increase your retirement income, but also act as a further hedge against inflation.

Consolidated Edison of New York sells to yield 4 per cent, which is an excellent yield from so secure a situation.

Standard Oil of New Jersey has come down in price, partly because of the escalation of the war in Viet Nam and also because of President Johnson's request to American corporations to cut down on foreign expenditures.

Selling now on a 3.8 per cent basis, the stock seems a sound investment. I would invest no more than $8,000 in these two stocks, leaving a savings reserve of $5,000 for all contingencies.

Q) "I have 60 shares of American Tobacco. Because of the much discussed health problem, I have wondered if you would advise holding this stock. I am not dependent on the income."

—H. B.

A) I am pleased that you are not dependent on American Tobacco's rather high rate of return, because I'm going to advise you to sell it.

The main attraction in American Tobacco is that it proposes to merge with Consolidated Foods. The Justice Department is said to be looking into the merger and it is not impossible that will fail to meet approval. If it does fail, I believe American Tobacco may sell lower.

The strongly unfavorable report of the Surgeon-General has had only a brief adverse effect on American's earnings. Nevertheless while the industry is under a cloud, I would avoid stocks in this group unless high income was absolutely necessary.

Three Are Booked To Take . . . After Incidents Handled by Police

Two men and a woman were booked on charges after separate incidents reported to local police Thursday night.

Alfred Bell, 34, of 146 Spring Street, was charged with unlawful intrusion and disorderly conduct after officers Raymond Wells and Curtis VanDemark were dispatched to 56 Smith Avenue. Louise Beck of that address was listed as complainant.

City court hearing was today put over to April 30. Bail of $100 was not immediately posted.

Alvin Melville, 34, of 350 South Wall Street, was charged with unlawful intrusion after a report at 8:55 p.m. that a fight was in progress at 64 South Washington Avenue. Donald DeWitt, of the latter address, was listed as complainant. Hearing was put over to April 23 and Melville was released in his own recognizance.

Helen Davis, 47, of 88 Shufeldt, was charged with disorderly conduct after a reported disturbance on Third Avenue, reported at 11:22 p.m. The charge was lodged by officers Wells and Van Demark, who had also been dispatched on the South Washington Avenue call. The woman pleaded guilty in city court today and sentence was postponed to May 1 to permit time for a presentencing investigation. She was released in her own recognizance.

Issue Warning On Toy Ducklings

ALBANY (AP) — A spokesman for the state's Health Dept. today warned Easter shoppers against buying natural looking stuffed ducklings being marketed in Pennsylvania.

The spokesman said he knew of no instances in which the toy was being sold in this state. The Pennsylvania labor and industry Dept. said the ducklings contain an organism called Salmonella which is injurious to health and possibly lethal to very small children.

Sale of the ducklings violates Pennsylvania state law, a labor and industry spokesman said. The toys appear lifelike because the skin and down are from real ducklings.

Part of $25,555 Grant

Speaking on chromosomes thusly, was Dr. Avery A. Sandberg, chief of the Medicine C Department at Roswell Park Memorial Institute, Buffalo. Dr. Sandberg and his associates, working on a grant of $25,555 from the American Cancer Society, have observed changes in the chromosome patterns in some patients suffering from leukemia.

This month is Cancer crusade month, and scores of volunteers are participating in a fund-raising campaign directed locally by the Ulster County Unit of the ACS.

Dr. Sandberg is one of several scientists sponsored by the ACS to study leukemia. Last year the society spent more than $2 million on research related to this disease.

Chromosomes are usually rod-shaped bodies seen under the microscope in the nucleus of a cell during the time the cell is undergoing division to form two cells. It is cell division, occurring thousands of times, which produces a living being from an original single cell and replaces the cells lost during normal living.

In their recent studies, Dr. Sandberg and his associates have observed several interesting occurrences in the chromosomal patterns of their leukemia patients:

(1) — Of 28 patients suffering from chronic myelocytic leukemia, 16 of them had an abnormal chromosome named "Philadelphia" chromosome.

"It was interesting to note," Dr. Sandberg said, "that the average age of those with the Philadelphia chromosome was 52 years, while those not having the abnormal chromosome averaged 65 years of age. Those with the abnormal chromosome also responded better to the drugs used to control their diseases, while those without the Philadelphia chromosome did not respond well to treatment."

Some Over 100

(2) — Some patients suffering from acute lymphoblastic leukemia tended to have more chromosomes than the normal 46. Some of the cases observed had more than 100 chromosomes. The greater the amount of chromosomes the better was the response to therapy.

(3) — Some patients suffering from acute myeloblastic leukemia, except for a group of elderly patients, showed fewer chromosomes than the normal 46.

"Although we do not yet know the precise significance of these observations, they do help us to better understand some of the complexity of the cell and of the disease," Dr. Sandberg said.

The chromosomal changes in human leukemia can be used as definite diagnostic criteria, particularly in patients with chronic myelocytic leukemia, and can be of great help in following the therapeutic course of patients.

"For a definitive answer to the problem," Dr. Sandberg said, "we must devote more time and money so that we may probe even deeper into the mechanisms which control growth—both normal and abnormal."

Funds contributed by Ulster County residents toward the 1965 Cancer Crusade quota of the local unit of the ACS aid greatly in furthering the work of scientists at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute.

Some scientists say raccoons moisten their food because they have poor salivary glands.

Master Plan for College Is Delivered to Albany

The master plan and preliminary data for Ulster Community College were delivered to the State University Architects office in Albany today.

This was announced by Dr. Dale B. Lake, president of the college, who said he and Augustus Schrowang Jr., delivered the materials and met briefly with Ellis Rowlands, State University Architect for Community Colleges.

Schrowang is of the architectural firm of Augustus Schrowang Associates, which prepared plans for the college to be built in Stone Ridge.

The total report presented to Albany consisted of 13 pages, copies of three College Trustees and Board of Supervisors resolutions, bird's eye photographs of the building complex, 16 pages of drawings, 4 pages of cube and square footage diagrams, and cost estimates for the first phase of construction.

The Ulster County Board of Supervisors at a meeting on April 8 adopted a resolution approving the college master plan and the five buildings to be included in the first phase of construction. Those five buildings will be the Macdonald DeWitt Library, science building, the business studies building, an all-purpose building and a residence for the college president.

The first four buildings are to be financed by a $150,000 cash gift from College Trustee Macdonald DeWitt, by county funds and by matching state funds. The residence will be financed by a cash gift from College Trustee Macdonald DeWitt, plus any matching funds from the state of New York.

Schrowang Associates have completed a three-dimensional model of the campus which is now on display in the County Office Building and which will be a part of the UCCS Exhibit in the forthcoming Lions Exposition. It is anticipated that the model will be placed on display at various places throughout Ulster County.

No Cause Verdict Is Returned on '63 Case

A no cause verdict was returned in County Court before County Judge Raymond J. Mino by the jury which heard the testimony in an action for assault brought by Hydreit S. Armstrong against Charles Carpio.

Plaintiff Armstrong alleged that he received a broken leg as the result of an altercation which took place outside a Broadway tavern on Dec. 28, 1963.

Armstrong brought an action against Charles Carpio, who in turn counterclaimed for assault. The jury returned a verdict of no case in both charges.

Plaintiff alleged he had gone to a tavern to see a tenant and collect rent. He alleged he was ordered to leave the tavern. Outside an altercation took place, according to testimony, and in the scuffle Armstrong suffered a broken leg.

Gaffney and Hill appeared for plaintiff and defendant, Carpio, was represented by Schick and Klein.

Thus far during the April term a total of 20 civil cases have been disposed of by Judge Mino, either through trial or other disposition.

Universities Clos

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Four universities were shut down for two weeks today as bloody clashes continued for the fourth day between police and thousands of students protesting government concessions to Japan.

Scores of students and 54 policemen were injured, 27 of them seriously, in one of the clashes with more than 6,000 rock-throwing demonstrators, police said.

Police arrested 475 persons, including 98 who were not students.

Sunny Easter Is Forecast

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — April showers are expected to stop long enough to give New Yorkers a moderately warm and largely sunny Easter.

The Weather Bureau today forecast temperatures in the 50s to around 60.

The forecast calls for showers to end in most areas tonight. Saturday will be mostly sunny with moderate temperatures in much of the eastern portion but rather cool in the western portion and east of Lake Ontario, the bureau said.

Wurts St. Man Charged; 2 Cars Found by Police

A local man was charged last night with petit larceny shortly after a 1949 sedan, reported stolen, was recovered, and a truck, also reported stolen last night was recovered today.

A report at 10:32 p.m. noted the theft of a car owned by Henry Buncie, of 395 Foxhall Avenue from near 10 Stuyvesant Street. It was reported recovered at 10:45 p.m., by officers Raymond Wells and Curtis Vandemark on Main Street.

Booked on the petit larceny charge was Alfred Smith, 24, of 1 Wurts Street. City court hearing was put over today until April 20.

A 1959 Chevrolet panel truck reported stolen last night from Drive-In Motors, 482 Albany Avenue, was recovered today near the state armory by officers George Dougherty and Charles Diers.

Truth Squad Is To See Hospitals

John Jenkins, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, today made known in Kansas City, Mo., the establishment of a "Truth Squad" to visit 32 Veterans Administration facilities scheduled for closing.

Three of the VA facilities are in New York State, and include the Castle Point Veterans Hospital near Beacon. Jenkins said the "Truth Squad" will report its findings to a special Blue Ribbon Committee appointed by President Johnson to look into the proposed closing of the VA facilities.

Meanwhile, John P. Battle, commander of the Beacon Disabled American Veterans Post, said petitions containing signatures of 2,500 Beacon area residents, have been sent to President Johnson in protest to the planned hospital closings, and signers are still being sought for the petitions.

Commander Battle said he hailed a proposal from an independent study showing that the three VA hospitals in New York State can play a role as nursing homes for veterans. The commander said Castle Point has an ideal location for a nursing home care and added that the "beautiful scenery along the Hudson River in the vicinity of the hospital in Southern Dutchess County can give these veterans an incentive to stay alive. It is completely different from staring at walls as would be the case in a hospital in a large city."

Approximately 400 beds are available at Castle Point, but only about 200 have been used for some time.

The Beacon Area Chamber of Commerce on Jan. 20, urged that the 400 beds be used for the government's nursing care program. The group called the planned closing of the hospital "a needless waste of efficient facilities."

Edinger, director of environmental sanitation of Ulster County Board of Health, on the smooth operation and good housekeeping practices at the new Hudson River water treatment plant.

A letter from Superintendent of Highways Paul Mercier requested the board take steps to increase the term of highway superintendent from two to four years. The board tabled the matter until it could receive ad-over the 1964 figures.

Supervisor Roger W. Mable stated the increases could not help but have a definite effect in lowering property taxes in 1966.

A report from the Bureau of the Census gave the preliminary population as of March 15, 1965 in the Town of Esopus as 7,109, an increase of 512 over the 1960 census figures. The total cost of the census was given as $2,005.48. As a result of the census, Esopus will gain $9,090 in increased State Aid over the next five years under the existing aid formula. If the new formula is enacted, the increase in aid over the next five years brought about by the special census will go to $19,845.

The formal contract from the State Health Department covering a $32,350 grant for a comprehensive sewerage study of the township was received. Supervisor Mable, commenting on the good fortune of the township in receiving the grant, stated the grant had "no strings attached," and in the event a sewerage installation should not be made as the result of the study, "the town is under no obligation to return one cent to anybody."

Apparently, there had been a report that the grant would have to be repaid if a sewer system were not installed.

The Town Board unanimously went on record as being in favor of the proposed dredging project planned for Rondout Creek by the Army Corps of Engineers, and to cooperate with the Town of Ulster and the City of Kingston in furnishing the necessary assurances of local cooperation requested by the Army Engineers. The project is expected to receive congressional approval in the near future.

A complaint was received from Arthur Isabella, Saugerties, about dumping on property he owns at Slightsburgh along Rondout Creek. The board regretted the dumping and agreed to place signs along town property bordering that of Mr. Isabella.

The board spoke at length about the civic irresponsibility and utter disregard of others by persons who dump trash and debris on properties bordering highways. The board was particularly bitter about dumping and littering that had taken place along the roads leading to Connelly, saying that the two roads in question could with but a little cooperation be two of the prettiest in the county.

Study Trailer Law

Councilman Rosenthal reported that the Town Board had held a special meeting on April 7 to rewrite the town's trailer ordinance and was scheduling a special meeting for April 28 to rewrite the town's "peddler's ordinance." The board hopes to revise and update a town ordinance each month until all existing ordinances are current.

DeVail H. Dunbar, building inspector, reported a sharp upswing in building construction in the township. During March, 11 building permits were issued with a total valuation of construction of $113,920. Permits covered one new home, three industrial buildings, one truck garage, one service station, two alterations to houses, and two alterations to commercial structures.

It was reported that the Ross Park Commissioners planned a meeting for April 20 to plan for the summer program and to select a director and assistant director. It was announced that the Rev. Cecil L. McFarland had tendered his resignation as chairman of the park commissioners and that the commissioners had recommended the appointment of Vernon L. Frost to succeed him. Frost's appointment as park chairman was unanimously approved. The Rev. Mr. McFarland will continue as a member of the commission.

The setting of a date for a public hearing on the proposed renovation of Ross Park was postponed until after the park commissioner's meeting April 20.

Roland H. Myers, chairman of Port Ewen Board of Water Commissioners, submitted a report noting that the average daily water usage during March had been 173,000 gallons.

Stocks With Good Yield Advised Near Retirement

Q: "My wife and I have saved $13,000. We have 100 Long Island Lighting and 30 General Telephone & Electronics. Is it a good idea to invest part of our savings in stocks that could bring some income when retirement comes? We are in our late 50's." —N. M.

A: Your present holdings are excellent and I believe you can invest more of your money in stocks — relatively stable issues that can not only increase your retirement income, but also act as a further hedge against inflation.

Consolidated Edison of New York sells to yield 4 per cent, which is an excellent yield from so secure a situation.

Standard Oil of New Jersey has come down in price, partly because of the escalation of the war in Viet Nam and also because of President Johnson's request to American corporations to cut down on foreign expenditures.

Selling now on a 3.8 per cent basis, the stock seems a sound investment. I would invest no more than $8,000 in these two stocks, leaving a savings reserve of $5,000 for all contingencies.

Q: "I have 60 shares of American Tobacco. Because of the much discussed health problem, I have wondered if you would advise holding this stock. I am not dependent on the income." —H. B.

A: I am pleased that you are not dependent on American Tobacco's rather high rate of return, because I'm going to advise you to sell it.

The main attraction in American Tobacco is that it proposes to merge with Consolidated Foods. The Justice Department is said to be looking into the merger and it is not impossible that will fail to meet approval. If it does fail, I believe American Tobacco may sell lower.

The strongly unfavorable report of the Surgeon-General has had only a brief adverse effect on American's earnings. Nevertheless while the industry is under a cloud, I would avoid stocks in this group unless high income was absolutely necessary.

Issue Warning

On Toy Ducklings

ALBANY (AP) — A spokesman for the state's Health Dept. today warned Easter shoppers against buying natural looking, stuffed ducklings being marketed in Pennsylvania.

The spokesman said he knew of no instances in which the toy was being sold in this state. The Pennsylvania labor and industry Dept. said the ducklings contain an organism called Salmonella which is injurious to health and possibly lethal to very small children.

Sale of the ducklings violates Pennsylvania state law, a labor and industry spokesman said. The toys appear lifelike because the skin and down are from real ducklings.

Woman Judge Is Braving Threats To Break Gangs

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"I'm not afraid—and won't ever be. Show fear and you're finished."

Judge Juanita Kidd Stout shuffled papers on a cluttered desk in her City Hall office and calmly analyzed her battle—despite threats on her life—to get juvenile gang members, mostly school truants, off the streets.

"Maybe in institutions we can help these boys and girls become useful members of society."

About those threats?

"I sleep just as well as I ever did. I regard them as an unfortunate part of my job. But you can't knock down threats, otherwise law and order vanish."

But if Judge Stout shows unconcern, city officials aren't ignoring possible danger. Police-men are with the 46-year-old jurist—the first Negro woman to hold such a post in Pennsylvania—wherever she goes.

Every man, woman or child who enters her courtroom is searched. So far, more than 100 knives, scissors, razors and other weapons have been confiscated.

Mrs. Stout, a Democrat, has been a judge of the County Court since 1959. She has been sitting in the court's Juvenile Division in recent months.

"Gangs must be broken," she said, pounding a book she held in her hand. "Whatever it takes to do it, must be done. If it means jailing boys and girls for 10 days or 100 days or more it has to be done. If a juvenile refuses to go to school he should be taken off the streets."

Most of the trouble, she feels, lies with disinterested parents "too busy or too lazy to properly teach and guide their children."

Judge Stout believes jail is the only immediate solution "or at least some kind of detention institution where a pattern of responsibility can be developed."

But juvenile centers are overcrowded. Judge Stout said Pennsylvania has bed space for 3,222 juvenile offenders "yet the average number of boys and girls now held in custody each day is more than 4,500."

Pennsylvania's welfare secretary, Arlin M. Adams, said it would take $2.5 million or more to provide proper quarters and personnel. He suggests more probationary sentencing.

Disagreeing, Judge Stout said, "I think it will be even more costly to do nothing and let the cost of crime, in dollars and human suffering, continue to rise."

Born in Wewoka, Okla., she is married to Dr. Charles O. Stout, a member of the Maryland State College faculty. She received her law degree at Indiana University.

East African fossil beds have yielded evidence that three entirely different kinds of prehistoric men were existing there alongside one another in the remote past.

Golden Cheer Is Keeping Busy

The Golden Cheer Club of Woodstock has nearly completed preparations for Easter. Using money remaining from Christmas donations, club members are decorating and filling baskets to be presented to the residents of the Lake Hill rest homes. Each will receive a basket filled with candy and the traditional colored Easter eggs.

In anticipation of further donations from interested residents and business establishments, the club is already planning activities for the coming summer. In the planning stages are an outside barbecue and a trip to the Catskill Game Farm.

Although Christmas is the largest undertaking in the club's efforts to bring cheer into the lives of the elderly, its members wish to provide more outings during the course of the year.

As one elderly lady remarked during the dinner in their honor at Deane's last Christmas: "I've been waiting all year to come here again."

Donations toward the work of the Golden Cheer Club may be sent to the Golden Cheer Club account, care of the Orange County Bank of Woodstock.

Dear Abby . . .

All Kinds of "Hunger"

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is one of those big-hearted, generous, "treat-the-gang" kind of men who is leading us to the poorhouse. When we go to his family's for dinner, he takes most of the food. When we go out with friends, my husband fights for the bill, and ends up paying for everything. Not only that, but he tips like a millionaire and he thinks nothing of lending people money when he knows he'll never see it again.

It's nice to be such a big-hearted guy, but we can't afford it. Our children wear rags and I am afraid to answer the phone for fear it's an angry bill collector. I have pleaded with him to let me handle the money, but he never does. What on earth ails a man like mine?

SECURITY HUNGRY
DEAR "HUNGRY": Your husband is "hungry," too. Hungry for praise and thanks. He wants desperately to make an impression. His heart may be in the right place, but he is only kidding himself. No one can buy friends. And furthermore, to treat others while one's own family does without is morally wrong. Luxury, as well as charity, should begin at home.

DEAR ABBY: I am 54 and everybody tells me I look 40. I stay in shape by lifting weights and working out with bar bells. I have a boy friend who is 66 and we have been going together for 12 years. I have my own flat and he owns his own house. I go over there almost every day to clean it up and keep his clothes in order. Lately he has been pretending that he is so tired at night he can't keep his eyes open when he's with me. But I found out that after I go home he gets dressed up again and goes out to meet girls who are young enough to be his granddaughters. Believe me, he looks his age, and if he didn't have money, no young girl would look at him twice. Do you think he is worth keeping? Or should I look for someone else?

KANSAS CITY LADY

DEAR LADY: Your "boy friend" appears to be enjoying his second childhood more than most boys enjoy their first. If he is slipping around behind your back, it's too late to decide whether or not you want to "keep" him. You've lost him. If you want to put up with that kind of foolishness, that's your business. But if you want a one-woman man, he's not it.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the young people in this community are different from those elsewhere, but it seems as though the girls are always thinking up ways to get the boys to take them out. Their latest trick is to organize a girl-ask-boy party, which I think is all right once in a while, but these girls are overdoing it. My problem is my 15-year-old daughter.

She is quite popular and has her share of dates, but when one of these girl-ask-boy affairs comes up, she always asks a boy who has never asked her to go anywhere with him. I try to tell her that she only makes herself look foolish, and she should ask one of the boys who has asked her out, but she won't listen to me. Abby, she reads your column. Maybe she'll listen to you. If I am wrong about this, please tell me.

MOTHER OF A STUBBORN GIRL

DEAR MOTHER: She probably won't listen to me either but, even though the temptation is great to get a "new" boy interested by inviting him to a girl-ask-boy party, the wise girl asks a boy who has shown enough interest in her to have invited her somewhere.

Critical of ParentsWoman Judge Is Braving Threats To Break Gangs

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"I'm not afraid—and won't ever be. Show fear and you're finished."

Judge Juanita Kidd Stout shuffled papers on a cluttered desk in her City Hall office and calmly analyzed her battle—despite threats on her life—to get juvenile gang members, mostly school truants, off the streets.

"Maybe in institutions we can help these boys and girls become useful members of society."

About those threats? "I sleep just as well as I ever did. I regard them as an unfortunate part of my job. But you can't knock down to threats, otherwise law and order vanish."

But if Judge Stout shows unconcern, city officials aren't ignoring possible danger. Police men are with the 46-year-old jurist—the first Negro woman to hold such a post in Pennsylvania—wherever she goes.

Every man, woman or child who enters her courtroom is searched. So far, more than 100 knives, scissors, razors and other weapons have been confiscated.

Mrs. Stout, a Democrat, has been a judge of the County Court since 1959. She has been sitting in the court's Juvenile Division in recent months.

"Gangs must be broken," she said, pounding a book she held in her hand. "Whatever it takes to do it, must be done. If it means jailing boys and girls for 10 days or 100 days or more it has to be done. If a juvenile refuses to go to school he should be taken off the streets."

Most of the trouble, she feels, lies with disinterested parents "too busy or too lazy to properly teach and guide their children."

Judge Stout believes jail is the only immediate solution "or at least some kind of detention institution where a pattern or responsibility can be developed."

But juvenile centers are overcrowded. Judge Stout said Pennsylvania has bed space for 3,222 juvenile offenders "yet the average number of boys and girls now held in custody each day is more than 4,500."

Pennsylvania's welfare secretary, Arlin M. Adams, said it would take $2.5 million or more to provide proper quarters and personnel. He suggests more probationary sentencing.

Disagreeing, Judge Stout said, "I think it will be even more costly to do nothing and let the cost of crime, in dollars and human suffering, continue to rise."

Born in Wewoka, Okla., she is married to Dr. Charles O. Stout, a member of the Maryland State College faculty. She received her law degree at Indiana University.

East African fossil beds have yielded evidence that three entirely different kinds of prehistoric men were existing there alongside one another in the remote past.

Golden Cheer Is Keeping Busy

The Golden Cheer Club of Woodstock has nearly completed preparations for Easter. Using money remaining from Christmas donations, club members are decorating and filling baskets to be presented to the residents of the Lake Hill rest homes. Each will receive a basket filled with candy and the traditional colored Easter eggs.

In anticipation of further donations from interested residents and business establishments, the club is already planning activities for the coming summer. In the planning stages are an outside barbecue and a trip to the Catskill Game Farm.

Although Christmas is the largest undertaking in the club's efforts to bring cheer into the lives of the elderly, it's members wish to provide more outings during the course of the year.

As one elderly lady remarked during the dinner in their honor at Deane's last Christmas: "I've been waiting all year to come here again."

Donations toward the work of the Golden Cheer Club may be sent to the Golden Cheer Club account, care of the Orange County Bank of Woodstock.

Fathers of three U.S. presidents (John Quincy Adams, Harding and Coolidge) lived to see their sons take office.

Dear Abby . . .

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is one of those big-hearted, generous, "treat-the-gang" kind of men who is leading us to the poorhouse. When we go to his family's for dinner, he takes most of the food. When we go out with friends, my husband fights for the bill, and ends up paying for everything. Not only that, but he tips like a millionaire and he thinks nothing of lending people money when he knows he'll never see it again.

It's nice to be such a big-hearted guy, but we can't afford it. Our children wear rags and I am afraid to answer the phone for fear it's an angry bill collector. I have pleaded with him to let me handle the money, but he never does. What on earth ails a man like mine?

SECURITY HUNGRY
DEAR "HUNGRY": Your husband is "hungry," too. Hungry for praise and thanks. He wants desperately to make an impression. His heart may be in the right place, but he is only kidding himself. No one can buy friends. And furthermore, to treat others while one's own family does without is morally wrong. Luxury, as well as charity, should begin at home.

DEAR ABBY: I am 54 and everybody tells me I look 40. I stay in shape by lifting weights and working out with bar bells. I have a boy friend who is 66 and we have been going together for 12 years. I have my own flat and he owns his own house. I go over there almost every day to clean it up and keep his clothes in order. Lately he has been pretending that he is so tired at night he can't keep his eyes open when he's with me. But I found out that after I go home he gets dressed up again and goes out to meet girls who are young enough to be his granddaughters. Believe me, he looks his age, and if he didn't have money, no young girl would look at him twice. Do you think he is worth keeping? Or should I look for someone else?

KANSAS CITY LADY

DEAR LADY: Your "boy friend" appears to be enjoying his second childhood more than most boys enjoy their first. If he is slipping around behind your back, it's too late to decide whether or not you want to "keep" him. You've lost him. If you want to put up with that kind of foolishness, that's your business. But if you want a one-woman man, he's not it.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the young people in this community are different from those elsewhere, but it seems as though the girls are always thinking up ways to get the boys to take them out. Their latest trick is to organize a girl-ask-boy party, which I think is all right once in a while, but these girls are overdoing it. My problem is my 15-year-old daughter.

She is quite popular and has her share of dates, but when one of these girl-ask-boy affairs comes up, she always asks a boy who has never asked her to go anywhere with him. I try to tell her that she only makes herself look foolish, and she should ask one of the boys who has asked her out, but she won't listen to me. Abby, she reads your column. Maybe she'll listen to you. If I am wrong about this, please tell me.

MOTHER OF A STUBBORN GIRL

DEAR MOTHER: She probably won't listen to me either but, even though the temptation is great to get a "new" boy interested by inviting him to a girl-ask-boy party, the wise girl asks a boy who has shown enough interest in her to have invited her somewhere.

Canadian Newsman Reports:

No Eve-of-War Feeling in Peking Despite Violent Anti-U.S. Words

FORWARD: American newsmen are barred by Red China. Occasionally a Canadian writer gets a visa. This is a report sent to the Southam Newspapers of Canada by the chief of the Southam News Services.

By CHARLES LYNCH

PEKING (AP) — Despite the violence of anti-American propaganda in Red China's capital, there seems to be no eve-of-war feeling in the Chinese air and no outward evidence that the Chinese government envisages escalation of the Viet Nam conflict into large-scale war.

The campaign against the U.S. government and armed forces was carried forward this week with the opening of a display of photographs, paintings and cartoons built around President Johnson as the arch-villain.

Propaganda Art

This sort of material, vividly displayed at the Peking Art Gallery, could be called the "pop art" of China today. The latest entries achieve new heights of bitterness replete with American skulls, American coffins, American graves, and American soldiers and politicians cowering before the stalwart people and troops of the Viet Cong and North Viet Nam.

Quiet crowds passed through the exhibit amid popping flashbulbs without any display of emotion. This Canadian correspondent, who from all appearances might be an American, passed through with them without incident.

Defensive in Tone

The middle remains of whether the Chinese intend to follow their battle of the posters with something more tangible. But the tenor of feeling here continues to be defensive in tone. The Chinese leave no doubt that they will fight if provoked but will not undertake provocation that would lead to military escalation.

The whole of the vast military apparatus of China is geared to defense of the homeland.

The end effect is a glorification of the military that has gone out of fashion in most nations of the world.

When the Chinese speak of contemporary themes in their current literature and theater they mean building up the army and Chairman Mao Tze-tung, and attacking old enemies, landlords and Americans, and new enemies, the Khrushchevite revisionists of Moscow.

To Reinforce Inside

The hate campaign seems designed not so much to stir up trouble outside as to reinforce the revolution inside the country and make sure that the young people of China don't lose their fervor for the backbreaking tasks that confront them at home.

This means that the country is holding a sort of perpetual pep rally and any target that presents itself is seized upon for its emotional content. The American government — not, one is assured, the fine working people of America, but the rascals in power — presents the most prized target, though the Chinese cartoonists are having some trouble with President Johnson and in some cartoons he seems to resemble Richard Nixon.

Just Publicity, Moscow View Of Nixon's Trip

MOSCOW (AP) — A Moscow newspaper said today former Vice President Richard M. Nixon's one-day visit to Moscow last weekend was a publicity stunt.

Komsomol Pravda said: "In a word, as in a real clown's act, he tried to provide sensational material for the foreign newspapermen who followed on his heels."

The newspaper also complained about statements Nixon made to newsmen after his visit about conditions in Russia.

In ancient Greece, thunder and lightning were considered omens of Zeus. The thunderbolt was said to have been cast by him, and any place which lightning struck was considered sacred. To hear thunder on the right before a battle was considered a favorable omen. The Romans associated thunder and lightning with their god Jupiter. However, they considered thunder heard on the left a favorable omen.

Capitol News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's industrial production and personal income are riding high.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday that the production index for March stood at 140.1. This was 40.1 per cent higher than the 1957-59 average, and up from February's 138.9 index.

The Commerce Department said personal income for March rose $2.5 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $513.5 billion. The increase of $9.4 billion in personal income for the first three months of the year was the greatest quarterly gain in six years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ship's bell of HMS Resolute, long a symbol of U.S.-British friendship, was given to President Johnson by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

The bell bears the following inscription: "HMS Resolute is a symbol of the links of friendship between Britain and the United States."

The ship was abandoned during an Arctic search in 1854. Found a year later by an American whaler, she was salvaged and sailed to the United States.

The U.S. government purchased the ship, then restored it to Queen Victoria.

Subsequently, Queen Victoria presented the United States with a desk made from timbers of HMS Resolute "as a token of good will and friendship."

The late President John F. Kennedy used the desk. Ultimately it will be placed in the Kennedy Library in Cambridge, Mass.

Ginger Returning

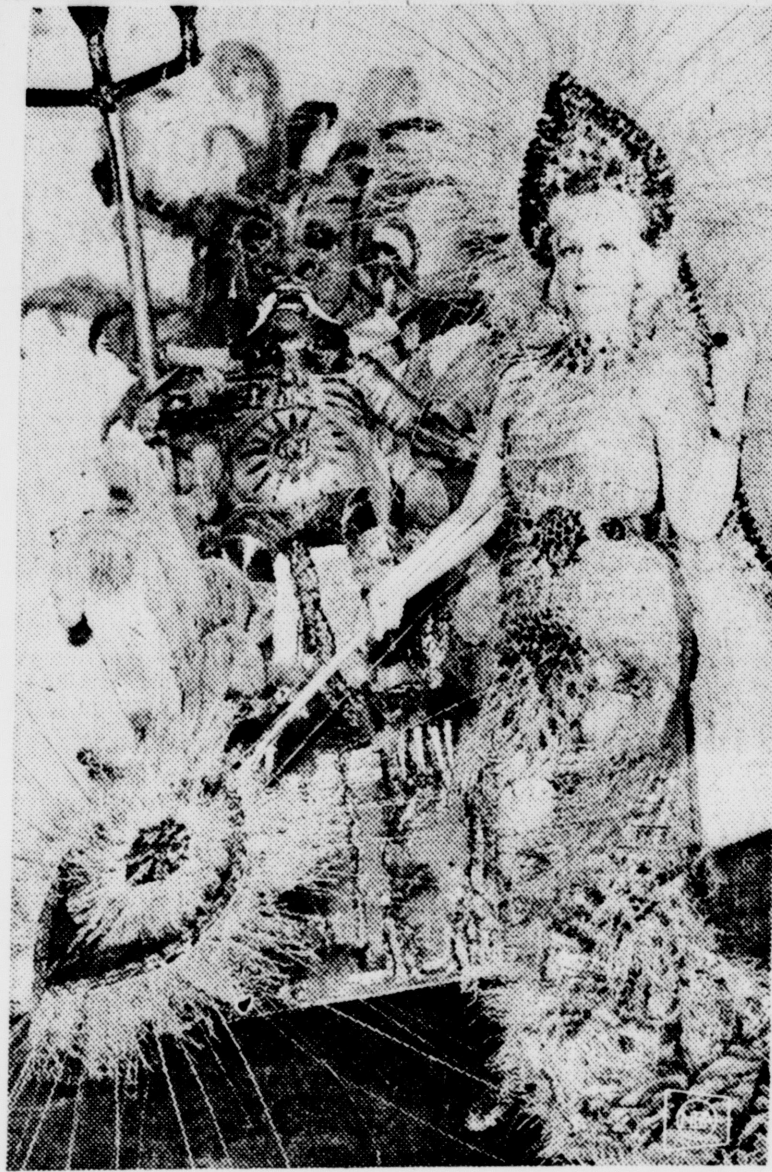

NEW YORK (AP) — Ginger Rogers will return to Broadway Aug. 23 after a 14-year absence to play the role of Dolly Gallagher Levi, matchmaker extraordinary, in the musical hit, "Hello, Dolly!"

An announcement Thursday said Carol Channing, who created the part, is taking a leave from the show to head the California company, which is scheduled to open Sept. 7 in San Diego.

Killed in Crash

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Wayne LaPier, 16, of Plattsburgh, was killed last night when the automobile in which he was a passenger crashed through a construction barricade on a city street.

Police said the car skidded more than 200 feet after the impact. Four other occupants were injured.

Area Residents Attend State TB Sessions in N. Y.

Dr. Frederic W. Holcomb Sr., president of the Ulster County TB and Health Association, attended the spring health conference sessions of the New York State Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association at the Hotel Statler Hilton, New York City Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. Holcomb is the local group's representative delegate to the State Association, and is a member of the State Board of Directors. The county group also was represented at the Tuesday sessions by Dr. Herbert F. Schwartz, chairman of the TB Association's Respiratory Disease physician committee.

They both were present for the Tuesday TB session under Dr. Gladys L. Hobby, and the luncheon meeting which featured State Commissioner of Health, Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham who discussed A New Look at an Old Enemy, and who was presented to the group by Dr. Joseph J. Witt, president of the State Association.

Dr. Holcomb attended the business meetings as well as the medical and educational sessions. Both he and Mrs. Holcomb also were present for a special Board of Directors dinner honoring Robert W. Osborn, retiring after 45 years as the State Association's Executive Director.

County Represented

Ulster County representatives at the Wednesday sessions were Miss Katherine M. Murphy, RN, honorary life member and former executive director of the Ulster County Association; Miss Almira Porter, RN and Miss Mabel Robinson, RN, Association program volunteers, and E. Robert Johnson, Association executive director. Special sessions included a discussion of the Philosophy and Recommendations in the Tuberculin Testing Programs, in which the chief participants were Dr. Julian Katz of the State Health Department, Dr. Leo V. Feichter of the State Education Department, Dr. Stephen C. F. Mahady, Director of Broadacres State Chest Clinic, and chairman of the New York State Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, and Robert D. Ragsdale, Executive Director of the State Association.

Johnson explained that the tuberculin test is one of the chief weapons in fighting tuberculosis. "Now that mass chest X-ray surveys are no longer practical in many areas of the state that have a low incidence rate of tuberculosis," he said, "the tuberculin test is our main technique for performing epidemiological studies. It is also a first step in

Local PO Will Handle Requests For Fulton Stamp

The Post Office Department today issued procedures for first day cover collectors desiring cancellations of the Robert Fulton commemorative stamp.

First day ceremonies for the stamp will be held August 19 in Clermont. Requests for covers, however, should not be sent to Clermont.

Collectors should address their requests: "First Day Covers Fulton Stamp, Postmaster, Kingston, 12401."

Covers will carry the Clermont cancellation, but will be processed at Kingston.

An earlier Post Office Department announcement had named Albany as first day city. Early-bird collectors who sent cover requests to Albany need not be concerned for their requests will be forwarded to Kingston, Clermont, the village where Robert Fulton and his wife lived, does not have a post office.

When there is a strong historical connection, it is not uncommon for the Post Office Department to create a cancellation for a temporary postal station as will be established at Clermont. This was done for the Project Mercury stamp, in 1962, which bore a Cape Canaveral cancellation, although there was then no post office with that name.

Orders to the Kingston Postmaster Oscar V. Newkirk for Fulton covers should not include requests for uncanceled stamps. Postage stamps and personal checks will not be accepted. Requests must be postmarked no later than August 19.

diagnosing tuberculosis. A positive reaction to a tuberculin test indicates that TB bacilli are present in the body, but does not mean that there is any active tubercular infection," he noted. "But a positive reaction should be followed up with a chest X-ray to find out whether disease is present. A negative reaction is proof of the body's freedom from tuberculosis."

Johnson pointed out that the Ulster County TB Association has worked annually in school tuberculin testing cooperatively with the Ulster County Department of Health. Later this month, the Association and Department of Health will provide tuberculin testing for high school students at a down-county school system. "The Tuberculin Testing Sessions we attended in New York at our State Conference are particularly meaningful for us since our association maintains a constant active role in Tuberculosis test work," he concluded.

Kenya Student Bares Race Hatred Experienced at School in Soviet

EDITORS NOTE — Twenty-nine Kenyan students have just returned from the Soviet Union. Following the death of an African student, a group at the University of Baku went on strike against racial discrimination. What followed is related by one of the students in this story told to The Associated Press.

By NICHOLAS NYANGIRA

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — What I learned in six months in the Soviet Union is what some Africans will never learn. They are taken to Russia's show-places and never experience the race hatred that I suffered at the University of Baku.

I also discovered it is easy to get into Russia but leaving can be a nightmare.

Went in Fear of Life

As a student leader who refused to swallow the Communist line, I went in fear of my life.

There were 12,000 students at Baku, most of them Russians but including young men and women from 13 African countries. There were 90 of us from Kenya.

We were referred to scathingly as "the blacks." Many local people had never seen an African before and because we were black they hated us.

Within a month or two most of us knew we were not going to like Baku.

But when we arrived they took away our passports and it was almost impossible to leave. You must even have a pass to visit a friend in another hostel.

We all lived in hostels, usually four people to a room. There was no rule that foreign students had to live together but we preferred it that way.

Abuse, Then Violence

Several Kenyan students got beaten up. Usually it would begin with abuse, then lead to violence. It was advisable to walk in pairs because if there was trouble you could expect no help from the police.

I don't remember a week that went by without an African student being robbed or attacked.

Most of us were better dressed than the Russian students and the local people and they resented it. They thought our clothes had been bought for us out of their taxes.

We got an allowance of 80 rubles — $88 at the official rate — a month, not much, but more than many Russians got in Baku. They felt we were leading a better life and this caused bitterness.

Question of Race

Basically, though, it was a question of race.

Taxis refused to pick us up and I was often refused service in restaurants.

We often got invited to student functions at the university but often when we sat down at a table with a group of Russians they would get up and leave.

Our main complaint was our lack of security.

The trouble reached a climax March 17 with the murder of a Ghanaian student, George Daku. There was no question of him dying a natural death. He was murdered, all right.

That was the last straw. After George's death we decided to demand a transfer to another university elsewhere in Russia and to go on strike until we got it.

We stayed in our hostel for a week before all going to the railway station. We stayed there for eight days and nights.

We wanted to go to Moscow but had no visas and so could not buy tickets. So we just sat there as a sort of pacifist demonstration.

Finally Soviet officials gave us an ultimatum — either we went back to our studies or we went home.

We decided to go home and were given 50 minutes to pack our bags.

There are still about 60 Kenya students in Baku and I think all of them want to escape. I know some who are planning to.

LBJ at Ranch

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson is at his ranch home near here for the Easter weekend. Guests include Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Robert S. McNamara.

Johnson flew to Texas Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Johnson met him here, having spent the week at the ranch.

Johnson took the McNamaras to Lake Llano where they joined a party of friends and took a leisurely cruise aboard a cabin cruiser owned by the Johnson family's broadcasting company.

They were on the lake several hours, finally docking under a full moon.

Prospects Dim

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A cease-fire has paved the way for peace talks between India and Pakistan over disputed marshland in the Rann of Kutch, near the Arabian Sea. But conflicting statements issued by both sides dimmed prospects for agreement.

The Rann of Kutch — an area of mud flats and brine deposits — has been the scene of border skirmishes since 1947.

Capitol News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's industrial production and personal income are riding high.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday that the production index for March stood at 140.1. This was 40.1 per cent higher than the 1957-59 average, and up from February's 138.9 index.

The Commerce Department said personal income for March rose $2.5 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $313.5 billion. The increase of $9.4 billion in personal income for the first three months of the year was the greatest quarterly gain in six years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ship's bell of HMS Resolute, long a symbol of U.S.-British friendship, was given to President Johnson by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

The bell bears the following inscription: "HMS Resolute is a symbol of the links of friendship between Britain and the United States."

The ship was abandoned during an arctic search in 1854. Found a year later by an American whaler, she was salvaged and sailed to the United States.

The U.S. government purchased the ship, then restored it to Queen Victoria.

Subsequently, Queen Victoria presented the United States with a desk made from timbers of HMS Resolute "as a token of good will and friendship."

Area Residents Attend State TB Sessions in N. Y.

Dr. Frederic W. Holcomb Sr., president of the Ulster County TB and Health Association, attended the spring health conference sessions of the New York State Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association at the Hotel Statler Hilton, New York City Tuesday and Wednesday. Dr. Holcomb is the local group's representative delegate to the State Association, and is a member of the State Board of Directors.

The county group also was represented at the Tuesday sessions by Dr. Gladys L. Hobby, the luncheon meeting which featured State Commissioner of Health, Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham who discussed A New Look at an Old Enemy, and who was presented to the group by Dr. Joseph J. Witt, president of the State Association.

Dr. Holcomb attended the business meetings as well as the medical and educational sessions. Both he and Mrs. Holcomb also were present for a special Board of Directors dinner honoring Robert W. Osborn, retiring after 45 years as the State Association's Executive Director.

County Represented
Ulster County representatives at the Wednesday sessions were Miss Katherine M. Murphy, RN, honorary life member and former executive director of the Ulster County Association; Miss Almira Porter, RN and Miss Mabel Robinson, RN, Association program volunteers, and E. Robert Johnson, Association executive director. Special sessions included a discussion of the Philosophy and Recommendations in the Tuberculin Testing Programs, in which the chief participants were Dr. Julian Katz of the State Health Department, Dr. Leo V. Feichtner of the State Education Department, Dr. Stephen C. F. Mahady, Director of Broadacres State Chest Clinic, and chairman of the New York State Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, and Robert D. Ragsdale, Executive Director of the State Association.

Johnson explained that the tuberculin test is one of the chief weapons in fighting tuberculosis. "Now that mass chest X-ray surveys are no longer practical in many areas of the state that have a low incidence rate of tuberculosis," he said, "the tuberculin test is our main technique for performing epidemiological studies. It is also a first step in

The Post Office Department today issued procedures for first day cover collectors desiring cancellations of the Robert Fulton commemorative stamp.

First day ceremonies for the stamp will be held August 19 in Clermont. Requests for covers, however, should not be sent to Clermont.

Collectors should address their requests: "First Day Covers Fulton Stamp, Postmaster, Kingston, 12401."

Covers will carry the Clermont cancellation, but will be processed at Kingston. An earlier Post Office Department announcement had named Albany as first day city. Earlybird collectors who sent cover requests to Albany need not be concerned for their requests will be forwarded to Kingston, Clermont, the village where Robert Fulton and his wife lived, does not have a post office.

When there is a strong historical connection, it is not uncommon for the Post Office Department to create a cancellation for a temporary postal station as will be established at Clermont. This was done for the Project Mercury stamp, in 1962, which bore a Cape Canaveral cancellation, although there was then no post office with that name.

Orders to the Kingston Postmaster Oscar V. Newkirk for Fulton covers should not include requests for uncanceled stamps. Postage stamps and personal checks will not be accepted. Requests must be postmarked no later than August 19.

diagnosing tuberculosis. A positive reaction to a tuberculin test indicates that TB bacilli are present in the body, but does not mean that there is any active tubercular infection," he noted. "But a positive reaction should be followed up with a chest X-ray to find out whether disease is present. A negative reaction is proof of the body's freedom from tuberculosis."

Johnson pointed out that the Ulster County TB Association has worked annually in school tuberculin testing cooperatively with the Ulster County Department of Health. Later this month, the Association and Department of Health will provide tuberculin testing for high school students at a down-county school system. "The Tuberculin Testing Sessions we attended in New York at our State Conference are particularly meaningful for us since our association maintains a constant active role in Tuberculosis test work," he concluded.

Kenya Student Bares Race Hatred Experienced at School in Soviet

EDITORS NOTE — Twenty-nine Kenyan students have just returned from the Soviet Union. Following the death of an African student, a group at the University of Baku went on strike against racial discrimination. What followed is related by one of the students in this story told to The Associated Press.

By NICHOLAS NYANGIRA

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — What I learned in six months in the Soviet Union is what some Africans will never learn. They are taken to Russia's show-places and never experience the race hatred that I suffered at the University of Baku. I also discovered it is easy to get into Russia but leaving can be a nightmare.

Went in Fear of Life
As a student leader who refused to swallow the Communist line, I went in fear of my life.

There were 12,000 students at Baku, most of them Russians but including young men and women from 13 African countries. There were 90 of us from Kenya.

We were referred to scathingly as "the blacks." Many local people had never seen an African before and because we were black they hated us.

Within a month or two most of us knew we were not going to like Baku.

But when we arrived they took away our passports and it was almost impossible to leave. You must even have a pass to visit a friend in another hostel.

We all lived in hostels, usually four people to a room. There was no rule that foreign students had to live together but we preferred it that way.

Abuse, Then Violence

Several Kenyan students got beaten up. Usually it would begin with abuse, then lead to violence. It was advisable to walk in pairs because if there was trouble you could expect no help from the police.

I don't remember a week that went by without an African student being robbed or attacked.

Most of us were better dressed than the Russian students and the local people and they resented it. They thought our clothes had been bought for us out of their taxes.

We got an allowance of 80 rubles — $88 at the official rate — a month, not much, but more than many Russians got in Baku. They felt we were leading a better life and this caused bitterness.

Question of Race

Basically, though, it was a question of race.

Taxis refused to pick us up and I was often refused service in restaurants.

We often got invited to student functions at the university but often when we sat down at a table with a group of Russians they would get up and leave.

Our main complaint was our lack of security.

The trouble reached a climax March 17 with the murder of a Ghanaian student, George Daku. There was no question of him dying a natural death. He was murdered, all right.

That was the last straw. After George's death we decided to demand a transfer to another university elsewhere in Russia and to go on strike until we got it.

We stayed in our hostel for a week before all going to the railway station. We stayed there for eight days and nights.

We wanted to go to Moscow but had no visas and so could not buy tickets. So we just sat there as a sort of pacifist demonstration.

Finally, Soviet officials gave us an ultimatum — either we went back to our studies or we went home.

We decided to go home and were given 50 minutes to pack our bags.

There are still about 60 Kenyan students in Baku and I think all of them want to escape. I know some who are planning to.

Texas Nurtures Ex-Kingstonian To Leadership in Gas, Oil Field

By ALBERT J. CAWEIN
Freeman Staff Writer

A Kingston youth of humble circumstances, who became one of the giants in the gas and oil industry, recently made financial headlines again in his adopted hometown, Corpus Christi, Texas.

He is Paul R. Haas, who was a Kingston High School honor student when he graduated with the Class of 1932. He is a son of Frederick J. Haas of 47 Third Avenue, Kingston. His mother, Amanda Lange Haas, died in June 1934.

$40 Million Deal

The financial pages a few weeks ago carried the story of a $40 million plus gas and oil deal involving the sale of properties owned by Prado Oil & Gas Company, Corpus Christi to Sohio Petroleum Company, a Standard Oil Co., (Ohio) subsidiary.

Haas is president of Prado. The announcement said his firm plans complete liquidation of assets and distribution of proceeds to shareholders. The purchase included 42,200 acres of producing leases and 8,700 acres of non-producing leases.

His rise to the position of leadership in the gas and oil industry had a humble beginning on Wall Street in New York City, where he started as a $15 per week accountant with Arthur Anderson Co.

Haas began his education at School No. 4, and after graduation attended Kingston High School. He graduated from the two-year college at that time, at the age of 19.

His first position was with a Wall Street international accounting firm. In 1937, when the firm opened an office in Houston, Texas, Haas was one of two named in charge of the office.

In his position as senior accountant for about four years, he conducted audits for various industries in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. During the summer he did graduate work in accounting at the University of Texas and earned his CPA rating in Texas in 1939.

PAUL R. HAAS

His interest in the gas and oil field increased because of his close association with companies in the industry.

During this period he became a close personal friend of the late Robert T. Wilson, a brother of Charles E. Wilson, former U.S. Secretary of Defense.

Became an Executive

Haas through this association was employed with the LaGloria Oil and Gas Co., of Corpus Christi by the late Mr. Wilson as an accountant. He gradually advanced in the firm to secretary to the president and later with two others purchased the company in 1954. He subsequently became vice president and treasurer of the company, one of the largest in the state.

About that time Haas was named to the Corpus Christi Board of Education and later became board president.

When the LaGloria company was sold to Texas Eastern Transmission, Haas was named secretary-treasurer of the firm. He later resigned to form the Prado company with two associates.

A busy man always has time for his community and church. Haas was that man. He headed many fund raising campaigns for charitable organizations and causes and as might have been suspected, was a pillar in his church, Park Avenue Presbyterian Church, Corpus Christi.

Active in Church

He served as an elder and was chairman of a building committee which raised more than $350,000 for a Sunday school addition. Some years later when he and his family moved into their new home at 36 Hewlett Drive, he gave the former family homestead at 315 Catalina Place to the church for a parsonage.

His local ties in Kingston in addition to his father include a sister, Mrs. Howard Kelder of 48 Third Avenue, who graciously provided personal information and background for this success story. The elder Haas who will be 89 in December, retired in 1946 after 48 years as a clerk for the Railway Express Agency in this city. He spends the fall and winter with his son in Texas.

The Haas family includes Mrs. Haas, the former Mary Diedrick of Carteret, N. J.; two daughters, Rheta, wife of Robert Page of Hinsdale, Ill., and Rene, 17, and a son, Raymond, 22, who is a student at Yale Law School. He is also married, and his wife attends college. The Pages have one daughter.

His sports, when he has time, are golf and duck hunting.

Active in School

In his earlier days here, he was a member of the first editorial staff of Dame Rumor, KHS newspaper. In addition he sang with the Glee Club, played violin in the high school band and was active in dramatics. He was also active in the Hi-Y youth organization.

One of his achievements as a student was the winning of the New York State George Washington Bicentennial Commission Essay and Oratorical contest. The prize was a trip to Washington, D. C., and a visit to President Hoover at the White House.

In high school he headed the Athletic Association for three years and was the first business manager of Dame Rumor. In Hi-Y, for the Deputation Team, he conducted musical services as leader of the orchestra and played in many churches in the area.

His yearbook prophecy in the 1932 Maroon reads: "Those who can command themselves can command others."

Named to Board

In 1959, he was named to the board of trustees at Rider College where he was a member of the Class of 1934. His strong interest in education led to his appointment as state representative to the Committee on Higher Education in Texas, a non-salaried post.

Now that he has sold his interest in the Prado firm, the logical question is, what will be his next financial venture?

His sister, Mrs. Kelder said, "This is something we never know until it happens."

It will be big, and will no doubt again make the headlines in the financial pages of the nation's newspapers.

This is the saga of a Kingston youth whose ambition, energy and resourcefulness brought him to a level with giants in the financial world, and now approaching his 50th year, he is looking to new and greater horizons.

High Court Rules Privacy Invaded By Late Story

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state's highest court has agreed with another court that the passage of time and other factors can remove a story from news coverage and make unauthorized use of the participants names an invasion of privacy.

In the 5-2 decision, the Court of Appeals upheld Thursday an appellate division decision that ruled James Hill, now of Gold Greenwich, Conn., the central figure in a nationwide news story, suffered an invasion of privacy when Life Magazine connected him three years later with a play based on the original incident.

Started In 1932

Hill and his family became the center of national interest in 1932 when three escaped convicts invaded their home in a Philadelphia suburb and held them hostage.

Three years later, Life published a story about the play, "Desperate Hours," and recalled the Hills. The play did not mention the family.

Hill brought suit against Time Inc., parent company of Life, under the New York State Civil Rights Law.

He cited a section prohibiting the use of the name of a living person without his consent, for advertising or "for the purposes of trade."

Published for Gain

Hill was awarded $30,000 damages.

The appellate division held that the purpose of the article had been to advertise the play and gain circulation for the magazine. The story could not be characterized as a mere "dissemination of news."

The passage of time and the Hills' attempt to avoid further publicity for the sake of their children were other factors that removed the story for news coverage that is not considered an invasion of privacy, the appellate division said.

Time contended that the provision of the civil rights law was "clearly incompatible with the

Was Eyes and Ears for Americans Back Home

Ernie Pyle's Memory Endures Well, Was A Man Worth Remembering

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — He came to the end of a tired road just 20 years ago this weekend.
He cautiously raised his head from a ditch on the tiny island of Ie Shima in the far Pacific. A Japanese sniper hit him in the left temple and Ernie Pyle died the death he had felt he would all along — a soldier's death.
His passing brought fresh sorrow to a homeland already in mourning for President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had died a few days before.
Touched Hearts of All
For no other newspaperman in history had touched the heart of the American people as did Ernie Pyle. He was their eyes and ears with their boys at the front in World War II.
He was as different from the most famous correspondent of World War I — Richard Harding Davis — as cornbread is from caviar.
Davis, handsome as a matinee idol, mixed in high society and was one of the best-dressed men of his day. He hobnobbed with generals, took a canvas bathtub with him when he went into the field, and wrote of war glamorously. He almost seemed to love war.
Ernie, an ex-farmboy from Indiana, stayed with the troops, ate what they ate, wore what they wore, slept in foxholes as they did. And from the depths of his soul he despised and hated war. He described it as a "perpetual weight that is compounded of fear and death and dirt and noise and anguish."
To him the only glorious thing about war was the wistful camaraderie with which it knit lonely men together in seamless unity in the performance of a common and dangerous mission.
Forget Generals, Not Ernie
It was my fortune to go through four campaigns with Pyle along with Don Whitehead, whom Ernie himself warmly admired as the greatest of the combat news correspondents.
Ernie's memory has endured well. Over the years, hundreds of people have asked me, "What was Ernie Pyle really like?" They have forgotten some of the famous generals; they still remember Ernie.
He was a man well worth remembering. He was of medium height, slender, and weighed about 113 pounds. Over his balding, grizzled hair he usually wore only a fatigue hat, because his helmet felt too heavy.
He had bright blue eyes in a leathery-crenky face and looked like a wise elf — eyes that saw both the grief and fun of being alive. He usually had a cold, and he suffered from secondary anemia — something only a few battlefield doctors knew.
Sensed His Kindness
No man I ever met could win affection and respect quicker. He had an instinctive well of human sympathy for people in trouble. Soldiers, who are people always in trouble, instinctively sensed that kindness in him. They liked him, too, because he was even more scared than they were by danger — and didn't mind admitting it out loud.
Twice he broke down under the strain and had to come home for a rest. In early 1945 he had done his duty and had earned enough money to satisfy his modest needs for life. But he took his final assignment because he felt he ought to.
Ernie went to the Pacific fatalistically convinced he wouldn't come back because he felt his luck had about run out after a score or more battlefields. It had.
"Sometimes," he wrote to a friend, "I get so sad and despairing and homesick I can hardly keep from crying."
But that didn't keep him from doing his job — telling the home-folks what their men at the front were doing.
If he were alive now, he'd be 64. He lies now shoulder to shoulder with other fallen men in a military cemetery at Honolulu, and there's no truer soldier and there's no truer soldier there than Ernest Taylor Pyle. Like the others, he beat down the human terror in him to become a hero.

Was Eyes and Ears for Americans Back Home

Ernie Pyle's Memory Endures Well, Was A Man Worth Remembering

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — He came to the end of a tired road just 20 years ago this weekend.

He cautiously raised his head from a ditch on the tiny island of Ie Shima in the far Pacific. A Japanese sniper hit him in the left temple and Ernie Pyle died the death he had felt he would all along — a soldier's death.

His passing brought fresh sorrow to a homeland already in mourning for President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had died a few days before.

Touched Hearts of All

For no other newspaperman in history had touched the heart of the American people as did Ernie Pyle. He was their eyes and ears with their boys at the front in World War II.

He was as different from the most famous correspondent of World War I — Richard Harding Davis — as cornbread is from caviar.

Davis, handsome as a matinee idol, mixed in high society and was one of the best-dressed men of his day. He hobnobbed with generals, took a canvas bathtub with him when he went into the field, and wrote of war glamorously. He almost seemed to love war.

Ernie, an ex-farmboy from Indiana, stayed with the troops, ate what they ate, wore what they wore, slept in foxholes as they did. And from the depths of his soul he despised and hated war. He described it as a "perpetual weight that is compounded of fear and death and dirt and noise and anguish."

BABSON on BUSINESS

By Roger W. Babson

PROMOTING EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE CO-OPERATION

BABSON PARK, Mass., April 16—Whether a firm is large, middle-sized, or small, it gets best results in terms of productivity and profits if there is mutual loyalty between management and workers. And this is much more difficult today than it sounds. Employers, for one thing, are so caught up in the competitive rat-race that they tend to concentrate on production and marketing, and leave labor relations pretty much to unions and department heads. Employees, on the other hand, are apt to forget the good of the company and think only of better pay envelopes, more fringe benefits, and looking for richer jobs.

Mutual Concern Pays Off

Both attitudes are self-defeating, and costly for all concerned. Astute employers recognize that their workers are not just cogs in the machinery of turning out products and getting them to market, but that they should be—and often are—co-workers and salesmen, ambassadors of good will. The extent of their value in these extracurricular pursuits is up to the foresight and imaginative vision of the employers themselves.

Naturally, it is management's responsibility to provide attractive working conditions, fair pay rates, and reasonable fringe benefits compatible with others in the same field and locality. But beyond this point the employer must start playing by ear. If he deals, for instance, in consumer goods, he can be certain that his personnel, their relatives, and their friends are possible customers. If he is wise, then, he will keep his work force constantly informed, not only regarding the workings of the factory but concerning the final products and how they may best be used. Company manuals and work-time demonstrations can easily generate employee interest and prod workers to spread the word concerning the quality and utilization of what they make.

Pride By Associates

Even if an employer's products are non-consumer in nature, employees can still offer very valuable publicity if they are intimately acquainted with the special qualities of the goods they are helping to turn out. If they are shown in what respect their products excel, they will be proud of their association with the company and will enjoy being experts. Through private and personal employee contacts have come lasting and rewarding accounts for firms whose employer-employee "relations are lively and friendly."

An intelligent employee recognizes that whatever he is doing for his company he is doing basically for himself—and for his fellow workers. To build up the company for which he works, to light up the image of its products, to help make its brand-name a byword, is to ensure his own job security and eventually to enlarge his own income and that of his co-workers. This relationship between management and staff must, however, work two ways: if there is to be a truly healthy stability in any business concern.

Especially For Young Companies
Small concerns—just getting under way—will find it helpful in bucking the bitter rivalry in all important lines today if they will sell every employee, from the very beginning, on the idea of becoming a salesman for their products and services. If a man is made to feel that he is a vital part of the company he works for, that he is trusted and taken into confidence on its problems as well as its successes, he is much more likely to stay put.

Labor turnover is, of course, one of industry's heaviest financial burdens, particularly today. Hence, everything should be done to promote employer-employee co-operation and mutual understanding for the purpose of building up an establishment that can focus its attention on improvement and expansion without being plagued by needless and costly replacement of restless workers. Whether a firm is unionized or not, it can make its employees proud of their association with it and eager to make its name and its products ever more widely known.

"CRUCIFY HIM!"

NEA Color Sketch by Artist Ed Kudlaty

They cried out, "Away with him, away with him, crucify him!"
Pilate said to them, "Shall I crucify your King?" The chief priests answered, "We have no king but Caesar." Then he handed him over to them to be crucified.

JOHN 19:15-16, RSV

DO YOU REMEMBER

By Sophie Miller

I have before me several items such as "A New Year's address of the Carrier of The Kingston Argus, January, 1871—J. Merton Bowman." This is printed on a good sheet of paper, in gold, green and red with illustrations. The other is "The Thirteenth Annual Address" of the Kingston Press to its Patrons, Jan. 1, 1888, in black print. These are long poems telling about the happenings of the year which passed, and I take it the last verse, asks for a donation for the carrier, as they wrote: "Your Carrier, through weather cold and warm—through burning sunshine—through the howling storm, has been found faithful; now, with heart sincere, He wishes you a pleasant, Happy New Year—and to reward him for his many trips. Be kind enough to come down with your Stamps. I do not know what they meant by Stamps in 1888, but little did they know when they wrote that verse before Jan. 1, 1888, that would come the storm of 1888 which is talked about till this year of 1965.

They speak in the verses about the Civil War and about "bounty-jumpers" writing thus: "Such there were in every state and county. Who did enlist but to jump the bounty? The bounty once secured, they ran away. And hasten'd over the line to Canada; Even there—though drinking friendly bumpers—Stigmatized they were as bounty-jumpers." Also verse reads: "And many fled but to escape the Draft—Sailed like a ship with rigger for-and-aft: Others were ailing, yet they drank their ale. And look'd like citizens robust and hale; With others indeed it was all the rage. To forward come, pleading alien-age—But when the Draft was over, poor trembling souls! They cued the Age that kept them from the polls." This was printed in Kingston, N. Y., by the Kingston Press, January 1, 1888.

They wrote about history as they knew it then, in 1888—which reads in part thus: "Jeff, in petticoats array'd. Might have escap'd had not his boots betrayed. The fact he strove so hard to keep unknown... That when he ran and gently rais'd his hoops. It was discovered by the Union troops: And hence the Chivalry were made to whine O'er their lost chieftain-caught in crinoline!" Those who know their leaders of the Civil War on both sides no doubt can guess who Jeff might have been.

The following they wrote about "local news" of Kingston in 1888: "Our thriving village with the times keeps pace—Improvements are constantly taking place—Soon horse-cars, moving to and from Rondout. Will frighten the 'slow coaches' from the route; Then, men and maidens who would take a sail, May ride down to the landing on the Rail." They refer to horse-cars and boats, I take it.

In the Kingston Argus of January 1871, (just about a year before Kingston was consolidated in 1872 with Rondout) in this also very long poem, about national and local politics and Wars, on local items they wrote in 1871: "Here, in our midst, on every side, We see, with a becoming pride, Progressiveness, with steady pace, Landmarks of other days displace. And in their stead new structures rise, Indicative of enterprise. Good schools to educate the mind—Churches of every name and kind—Merchants in every line of trade—Clean streets, good walks with ample shade—A steam railway in operation—Another still in contemplation—A public hall wherein to spend A season after labors end—And our pretty girls, With huge chignons and borrowed curls." So then in 1871, as now in 1965, chignons and borrowed curls was the latest style.

Today's Business Mirror

By SAM DAWSON

AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Good Friday clamps a silence on the stock exchanges. Much of the world's monetary affairs will come to a halt until Monday.

The world has other things more important to it than the rise or fall of stock price averages.

Still Shaky Peace
It can hope for peace, even if the sound of guns and bombing may still be heard in many places.

Americans can hope for better days ahead, even if the flood waters still rise in some sections, and the horror of recent tornadoes darkens the Easter. They can hope for peace in industries now torn by management-labor in-fighting, or at least for compromises that will have the public's interest in mind.

The few days of pause in concentration on monetary affairs may help those charged with trying to straighten out the world's currency angle.

The irritability aroused by French President de Gaulle's attack on the American dollar and the British pound as international standards may slacken.

And out of the visit of Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain to President Johnson may come impetus to a more peaceful solution—seeking not to scuttle the dollar and the pound but to work out a new international monetary system that will benefit all nations rather than just bolster the prestige of one over another.

Minds Fixed on Churches
On this weekend of Easter and Passover, Americans will have their minds fixed on their churches and synagogues rather than on their broker's board room. They can hope, at least, that by some miracle the gap between denominations and faiths may be narrowed.

Where the economy is headed—that worry can be put off until Monday.

How high the Gross National Product rises seems less important on Good Friday than how many share in this prosperity. And today more do share than did last year, or the year before—and there is hope, at least, that this widening of the benefits will increase this year and next.

And at this season many will note that now there is a wider acceptance of the belief that prosperity should be for all—and increased emphasis on policies designed to see that it is.

TV Reviews,
Best Bets

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It has now been pretty well established by trial and error that the job of presiding over a late-evening, informal, fun-and-entertainment session on television requires a special talent. It's mostly because the people who watch these shows are a special kind of audience.

The most recent Nielsen statistics indicate that television sets in about one of every four homes remain turned on between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m., and that around 24 million viewers watch the late news and weather and then stay awake for an old movie or something like NBC's "Tonight" show or ABC's "Nightlife."

In the non-old-movie area, Johnny Carson's NBC show attracts the largest number of viewers, estimated by Nielsen at around 3½ million homes. ABC trying to attract some of the late viewers, launched "The Les Crane Show" this season, but low ratings and critical drubbing killed the show after a short time. Now remodeled as "Nightlife," it is still attracting a comparatively small audience—something under a million homes.

Dave Garroway, a man with a built-in gentle style, an off-beat sense of humor and an ability to listen as well as talk, will be moving aboard the 11:15 p.m. to 1 a.m. show next Monday for a week. He may prove to be exactly what the program needs.

Garroway has not been a TV regular since he departed from NBC's "Today" show several seasons back. When he was there he built the show into a daily habit for a big audience. Another contender is moving into the late show preserve—Merv Griffin, whose syndicated show starts early in May.

Recommended week-end viewing:
Tonight — Bob Hope Comedy Special, NBC, 8:30-9:30 (EST), with Nancy Wilson and Frankie Avalon.

Sunday — "Way of the Cross," NBC, 2-3 p.m., rerun of a color classic; "Zoorama," CBS, 5-5:30, premiere of a new series made at the San Diego Zoo; "Marmelade Carnival," CBS, 7-8 p.m., comedy-variety show with members of the "Munster" cast as guest stars.

This Peacetime Congress Has Record for Accomplishments

By JAMES MARLOW

Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — This was the tornado season in Washington, too.

Usually, up to Easter, Congress just yawns and gets ready for what it will do afterwards.

This year Congress goes home on Easter vacation with an impressive record.

No peacetime Congress since the opening of the New Deal has done so much early in a session on major legislation.

It has lots to do when it returns but so far:

1. Congress has approved the first federal aid to schools bill, plus help for the Appalachian area.

2. The House has approved, and the Senate is expected to, a program of health care for the aged.

3. Both houses have approved a proposed constitutional amendment to protect the country in case of presidential disability. House and Senate differed a bit on this. Almost certainly they will straighten this out and okay the measure.

4. President Johnson's request for legislation to protect Negroes' voting rights seem sure of passage after Easter.

All this with a minimum, almost a lack of fuss. That's the astonishing part of the performance, particularly on health care and school aid.

Both had been stuck in Congress for years although each was proposed year after year.

Get Another Chance
To Save Their Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of Rome, N.Y., and employees at Griffiss Air Force Base there have been granted another try in an effort to block the Defense Department's plan to close the air material area at the base.

The Court of Appeals has set May 11 for a hearing on the dismissal by the federal district court of a challenge to the closing order.

The challenge was brought by employees of the base and Samuel B. Wardwell Jr., a Rome hardware store operator.

The group had urged the court to reverse the decision and keep the 2,700 civilian employees at Rome. The district court dismissed the suit upon a motion by the U.S. Attorney's office here.

The closing of the operation is to be completed by June 31, 1967.

Parakeet Contest

CHICAGO (AP) — Twenty, a parakeet, won first prize in a talking-bird contest and a thank you note from L. B. J.

Twenty says things like "Vote for Johnson" and "I'm a Democrat" and "I'm a Texan."

"Of course, I was the one who wrote the President about Twenty," said Mrs. Leo L. Wexler, the bluish bird's owner.

Minimum of Fuss

As majority leader in the Senate between 1955 and 1960 he was the best Senate leader in this century.

That experience, in addition to his previous years in House and Senate, is being used now to get Congress to do what he wants.

Johnson has one big advantage that President Kennedy didn't have when the latter took over the White House and national leadership in 1961.

Johnson, thanks to the 1964 election, has far more Democrats in Congress to support him. Which means there are far fewer Republicans to oppose him.

Even so, Kennedy wasn't in the same league with Johnson in dealing with Congress. He lacked the experience and the mastery and he didn't work as hard.

Experienced Washington hands are holding their breath, and perhaps Johnson is too, to see whether his success with the men in the Capitol will last.

Should Move Mountains

If it lasts four years, which was the length of Franklin D. Roosevelt's successful peacetime period, Johnson and Congress should move mountains.

Johnson is seldom likely to demand from Congress perfect programs, completely packed. Anyone who expects this doesn't know him and is unrealistic.

His is the foot-in-the-door technique. Get Congress to approve a program, even though it's hardly more than a start.

The start is what counts. Once the wall of opposition is broken down, he will try to improve and expand it later.

That's what he did in getting the Senate to approve the 1957 civil rights bill. It was the first such bill approved in this century.

Breaks Resistance

It broke the back of Southern resistance, even though Negroes didn't get enthusiastic about it.

Then two more civil rights bills, one in 1960 and the next in 1964, moved through Congress. Now, another, on voting rights, is coming up.

The health care and school aid bills of this year are only beginnings. Anyone who doubts it had better remember the skinny beginning of the first Social Security Act in 1935. It's been expanded enormously since.

But there's a lot of other legislation awaiting Congress' return. There is no reason to think Johnson won't succeed with all, or almost all, of it.

Company manuals and work-time demonstrations can easily generate employee interest and prod workers to spread the word concerning the quality and utilization of what they make.

Pride By Associates

Even if an employer's products are non-consumer in nature, employees can still offer very valuable publicity if they are intimately acquainted with the special qualities of the goods they are helping to turn out. If they are shown in what respect their products excel, they will be proud of their association with the company and will enjoy being experts. Through private and personal employee contacts have come lasting and rewarding accounts for firms whose employer-employee relations are lively and friendly.

An intelligent employee recognizes that whatever he is doing for his company he is doing basically for himself—and for his fellow workers. To build up the company for which he works, to light up the image of its products, to help make its brand-name a byword, is to ensure his own job security and eventually to enlarge his own income and that of his co-workers. This relationship between management and staff must, however, work two ways if there is to be a truly healthy stability in any business concern.

Especially For Young Companies
Small concerns—just getting under way—will find it helpful in bucking the bitter rivalry in all important lines today if they will sell every employee, from the very beginning, on the idea of becoming a salesman for their products and services. If a man is made to feel that he is a vital part of the company he works for, that he is trusted and taken into confidence on its problems as well as its successes, he is much more likely to stay put.

Labor turnover is, of course, one of industry's heaviest financial burdens, particularly today. Hence, everything should be done to promote employer-employee co-operation and mutual understanding for the purpose of building up an establishment that can focus its attention on improvement and expansion without being plagued by needless and costly replacement of restless workers. Whether a firm is unionized or not, it can make its employees proud of their association with it and eager to make its name and its products ever more widely known.

"CRUCIFY HIM!"

NEA Color Sketch by Artist Ed Kudlaty

They cried out, "Away with him, away with him, crucify him!"
Pilate said to them, "Shall I crucify your King?" The chief priests answered, "We have no king but Caesar." Then he handed him over to them to be crucified.

DO YOU REMEMBER

By Sophie Miller

I have before me several items such as "A New Year's address of the Carrier of The Kingston Argus, January, 1871—J. Merton Bowman." This is printed on a good sheet of paper, in gold, green and red with illustrations. The other is "The Thirteenth Annual Address" of the Kingston Press to its Patrons, Jan. 1, 1888, in black print. These are long poems telling about the happenings of the year which passed, and I take it the last verse, asks for a donation for the carrier, as they wrote: "Your Carrier, through weather cold and warm—through burning sunshine—through the howling storm, has been found faithful; now, with heart sincere, He wishes you a pleasant, Happy New Year—and to reward him for his many tramps. Be kind enough to come down with your Stamps. I do not know what they meant by Stamps in 1888, but little did they know when they wrote that verse before Jan. 1, in 1888, that would come the storm of 1888 which is talked about till this year of 1965.

They speak in the verses about the Civil War and about "bounty-jumpers" writing thus: "Such there were in every state and county. Who did enlist but to jump the bounty—The bounty once secured, they ran away. And hasten'd o'er the line to Canada; Even there—though drinking friendly bumpers—Stigmatized they were as bounty-jumpers." Also verse reads: "And many fled but to escape the Draft—Sailed like a ship with rigger for-and-aft: Others were ailing, yet they drank their ale. And look'd like citizens robust and hale; With others indeed, it was all the rage, To forward come, pleading alien-age—But when the Draft was o'er, poor trembling souls! They curs'd the Age that kept them from the polls." This was printed in Kingston, N. Y., by the Kingston Press, January 1, 1888. They wrote about history as they knew it then, in 1888—which reads in part thus: "Jeff, in petticoats array'd, Might have escap'd had not his boots betrayed. The fact he strove so hard to keep unknown... That when he ran and gently rais'd his hoops. It was discovered by the Union troops; And hence the Chivalry were made to whine O'er their lost chieftain-caught in crinoline!" Those who know their leaders of the Civil War on both sides no doubt can guess who Jeff might have been.

The following they wrote about "local news" of Kingston in 1888: "Our thriving village with the times keeps pace—Improvements are constantly taking place—Soon horse-cars, moving to and from Rondout, Will frighten the 'slow coaches' from the route; Then, men and maidens who would take a sail, May ride down to the landing on the Rail." They refer to horse-cars and boats, I take it.

In the Kingston Argus of January 1871, (just about a year before Kingston was consolidated in 1872 with Rondout) In this also very long poem, about national and local politics and wars, on local items they wrote in 1871: "Here, in our midst, on every side, We see, with a becoming pride, Progressiveness, with steady pace, Landmarks of other days displace. And in their stead new structures rise, Indicative of enterprise. Good schools to educate the mind—Churches of every name and kind—Merchants in every line of trade—Clean streets, good walks with ample shade—A steam railway in operation—Another still in contemplation—A public hall wherein to spend A season after labors end—And our pretty girls, With huge chignons and borrowed curls." So then in 1871, as now in 1965, chignons and borrowed curls was the latest style.

NEW YORK (AP) — Good Friday clamps a silence on the stock exchanges. Much of the world's monetary affairs will come to a halt until Monday.

The world has other things more important to it than the rise or fall of stock price averages.

Still Shaky Peace
It can hope for peace, even if the sound of guns and bombing may still be heard in many places.

Americans can hope for better days ahead, even if the flood waters still rise in some sections, and the horror of recent tornadoes darkens the Easter.

They can hope for peace in industries now torn by management-labor infighting, or at least for compromises that will have the public's interest in mind.

The few days of pause in concentration on monetary affairs may help those charged with trying to straighten out the world's currency angle.

The irritability aroused by French President de Gaulle's attack on the American dollar and the British pound as international standards may slacken.

And out of the visit of Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain to President Johnson may come impetus to a more peaceful solution—seeking not to scuttle the dollar and the pound

TV Reviews,

Best Bets

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It has now been pretty well established by trial and error that the job of presiding over a late-evening, informal, fun-and-entertainment session on television requires a special talent. It's mostly because the people who watch these shows are a special kind of audience.

The most recent Nielsen statistics indicate that television sets in about one of every four homes remain turned on between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m., and that around 24 million viewers watch the late news and weather and then stay awake for an old movie or something like NBC's "Tonight" show or ABC's "Nightlife."

In the non-old-movie area, Johnny Carson's NBC show attracts the largest number of viewers, estimated by Nielsen at around 31 1/2 million homes. ABC trying to attract some of the late viewers, launched "The Les Crane Show" this season, but low ratings and critical drubbing killed the show after a short time. Now remodeled as "Nightlife," it is still attracting a comparatively small audience—something under a million homes.

Dave Garroway, a man with a built-in gentle style, an off-beat sense of humor and an ability to listen as well as talk, will be moving aboard the 11:15 p.m. to 1 a.m. show next Monday for a week. He may prove to be exactly what the program needs.

Garroway has not been a TV regular since he departed from NBC's "Today" show several seasons back. When he was there he built the show into a daily habit for a big audience. Another contender is moving into the late show preserve—Merv Griffin, whose syndicated show starts early in May. Recommended week-end viewing:

Tonight—Bob Hope Comedy Special, NBC, 8:30-9:30 (EST), with Nancy Wilson and Frankie Avalon.

Sunday—"Way of the Cross," NBC, 2-3 p.m., rerun of a color classic; "Zoorama," CBS, 5:55-6:30, premiere of a new series made at the San Diego Zoo; "Marmelade Carnival," CBS, 7-8 p.m., comedy-variety show with members of the "Munster" cast as guest stars.

This Peacetime Congress Has Record for Accomplishments

By JAMES MARLOW

Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — This was the tornado season in Washington, too.

Usually, up to Easter, Congress just yawns and gets ready for what it will do afterwards. This year Congress goes home on Easter vacation with an impressive record.

No peacetime Congress since the opening of the New Deal has done so much early in a session on major legislation.

It has lots to do when it returns but so far:

1. Congress has approved the first federal aid to schools bill, plus help for the Appalachian area.

2. The House has approved, and the Senate is expected to, a program of health care for the aged.

3. Both houses have approved a proposed constitutional amendment to protect the country in case of presidential disability. House and Senate differed a bit on this. Almost certainly they will straighten this out and okay the measure.

4. President Johnson's request for legislation to protect Negroes' voting rights seem sure of passage after Easter.

All this with a minimum, almost a lack, of fuss. That's the astonishing part of the performance, particularly on health care and school aid.

Both had been stuck in Congress for years although each was proposed year after year.

Get Another Chance To Save Their Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of Rome, N.Y., and employees at Griffiss Air Force Base there have been granted another try in an effort to block the Defense Department's plan to close the air material area at the base.

The Court of Appeals has set May 11 for a hearing on the dismissal by the federal district court of a challenge to the closing order.

The challenge was brought by employees of the base and Samuel B. Wardwell Jr., a Rome hardware store operator. The group had urged the court to reverse the decision and keep the 2,700 civilian employees at Rome. The district court dismissed the suit upon a motion by the U.S. Attorney's office here.

The closing of the operation is to be completed by June 31, 1967.

Parakeet Contest

CHICAGO (AP) — Tweety, a parakeet, won first prize in a talking-bird contest and a thank you note from L. B. J.

Tweety says things like "Vote for Johnson" and "I'm a Democrat" and "I'm a Texan."

"Of course, I was the one who wrote the President about Tweety," said Mrs. Leo L. Wexler, the bluish bird's owner.

Tweety competed with eight other parakeets. His first prize wasn't exactly bird seed—$150.

Q: When a group go to dinner and the bill is to be divided evenly among them, isn't it bad manners for one or two in the group to order the most expensive dishes on the menu while the others order dishes of moderate price? Shouldn't all try to order food within the same price range when the bill is being split?

A: To order the most expensive dishes on the menu is very unfair to the others who are sharing the bill and if one wishes something special, he or she should insist on paying the extra amount.

British Monarchy Is 20th Century Club Meeting Topic

Twentieth Century Club met on Monday, April 12 at the home of Mrs. John Pope on Highland Avenue and Mrs. W. Dale Swartzmiller presided. During the brief business meeting, Mrs. Alexander Goercke read a letter expressing appreciation for the recent contribution to the American-Korean Foundation, Inc.

Mrs. Swartzmiller spoke of the New York State Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to be held at Binghamton May 4, 5 and 6. Members were also reminded of Twentieth Century Club's annual banquet on Tuesday, May 25.

Mrs. Pope's program paper presented a study of Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain. She stated that this young monarch was, in terms of personality as well as the extent of her influence in affairs of state, one of the most underestimated women in the world. Since George III, no British monarch has played a direct role in governing Britain. The laws are made by Parliament, the patronage is dispersed by politicians of the majority party who form the government. The Queen does retain certain prerogatives, i.e. the monarch's four rights — to be informed, to be consulted, to warn, to encourage. She can and does read all State papers including the most top secret. It is not impossible to foresee the day when the business of advice and consultation with such a queen may be no mere formality. When the young queen came to the throne in 1953 she adhered pretty much to precedent, but in due time endeavored to change some of the court's outmoded customs — among them, that of presenting debutantes at court. Royal tradition is not easy to change, but the Queen and Prince Philip decided not to have Prince

Charles and Princess Anne educated by tutors, but sent them to school with other children their own age. The same procedure will follow in educating their two other children, Mrs. Pope said.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. R. R. Empringham on Lucas Avenue. Mrs. Swartzmiller will present a study paper, "The Promised Land."

Mrs. Swartzmiller spoke of the New York State Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to be held at Binghamton May 4, 5 and 6. Members were also reminded of Twentieth Century Club's annual banquet on Tuesday, May 25.

Mrs. Pope's program paper presented a study of Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain. She stated that this young monarch was, in terms of personality as well as the extent of her influence in affairs of state, one of the most underestimated women in the world. Since George III, no British monarch has played a direct role in governing Britain. The laws are made by Parliament, the patronage is dispersed by politicians of the majority party who form the government. The Queen does retain certain prerogatives, i.e. the monarch's four rights — to be informed, to be consulted, to warn, to encourage. She can and does read all State papers including the most top secret. It is not impossible to foresee the day when the business of advice and consultation with such a queen may be no mere formality. When the young queen came to the throne in 1953 she adhered pretty much to precedent, but in due time endeavored to change some of the court's outmoded customs — among them, that of presenting debutantes at court. Royal tradition is not easy to change, but the Queen and Prince Philip decided not to have Prince

Charles and Princess Anne educated by tutors, but sent them to school with other children their own age. The same procedure will follow in educating their two other children, Mrs. Pope said.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. R. R. Empringham on Lucas Avenue. Mrs. Swartzmiller will present a study paper, "The Promised Land."

Local Delegates Train for Scout Roundup in July

A teen-city will spring to life overnight at Farragut, Idaho, next July when Senior Girl Scouts hold their fourth Roundup.

Nine thousand Senior Girl Scouts, 15 through 17 years of age, from every state in the United States, and 150 Girl Guides from 45 countries will get together in a gigantic encampment from July 15-28. Backing up the youth-centered community will be a staff of 2,000 adults, most of them volunteers, who will provide the services needed in a busy city. Four Senior Girl Scouts from the Ulster County Girl Scout Council will be part of this great gathering.

The Senior Girl Scouts will build a city of 6,000 multi-colored tents in the heart of a 5,000-acre tract at the site of the former Farragut Naval Training Station, in the Idaho Panhandle. The location is 50 miles east of Spokane, Wash., on the extreme south end of Lake Pend Oreille.

While the girls themselves will be setting up an instant city, actually a year-and-a-half of planning and work will have gone into preparation for the multitude of facilities needed—roadways, a water supply system, electric power, telephones, a parking lot for 3,000 visitors' cars, provisions for security traffic control, fire protection and sanitation, and even a United States Post Office sub-station.

Fascinating Schedule
Roundup days and nights will be filled with a fascinating range of things to see and do—performances by Idaho's Basque Dancers, tree-climbing contests, log-rolling demonstrations, exhibits of the culture and crafts of the Nez Perce Indians, tours of the Kanikau National Forest, and simply taking part in the daily round of camping activities. A Forum Center will operate on nine afternoons of the Roundup. Experts in various fields will be present to lead, moderate, and stimulate discussions built around the general theme, "Girl Scouting—A Promise in Action."

All 11,000 Roundupers will come together as a group for two special events in a vast arena which seats more people than New York's Radio City Music Hall. The Arena, built against a background of white pine groves and towering mountains, also will be used for religious observances.

The campers will bring many touches of home with them as individual patrols illustrate typical features of their respective regions or countries. These will include folk-dancing, singing, cooking and demonstrations built around local industry and culture. Another reflection of "back home" will be the exchange of potlatch gifts, following a custom of the Northwest Indians. The potlatches will be small handmade articles related to the history of the girls' home regions.

Roundup is designed to provide a true adventure in living and learning for girls of different races, national origins and creeds. An outstanding event for girls in the free world, it is an experience for which many of Girl Scouts more than 3,000,000 young members strive from their earliest Scouting days.

Local Training Session
Two Roundup patrols of Senior Girl Scouts from Ulster, Orange and Sullivan County Councils had one of several training sessions at Camp Mountain Pal, Mt. Tremper, in Ulster County recently.

The girls arrived Friday evening and were soon settled in their cabins—one patrol to a cabin and adult trainers in the third cabin. After their patrol meeting the Scouts held a general meeting followed by the patrol demonstration to be performed at Roundup.

One patrol will be doing a Dutch dance—because the area was first settled by the Dutch. The name is "de Klompen Popen," the Senior Scouts will be making their own costumes and have sent to Holland for wooden shoes for each patrol member. The other patrol Temple Hill

St. Joseph's Rosary Society
St. Joseph's Rosary Society will hold its regular monthly meeting at 8 p. m. on Monday, April 19, in the school hall. Mrs. Robert Bartz, program chairman, has announced that there will be a special program after the business meeting. All women of the parish are invited to attend.

SAVOR THE FLAVOR—Senior Girl Scouts test their outdoor skills in preparation for Roundup to be held at Farragut, Idaho in July. Local delegates will join Senior Scouts from all parts of the country in a gigantic encampment from July 15 to 28. Preparing breakfast at Camp Mountain Pal, Mt. Tremper, at a recent overnight training session are Sue Davidson of New Paltz; Jill Gardner of Florida and Mary Lou Josefski of Kingston.

Regiment is doing a military drill of the revolutionary days. They too are making their uniforms. The girls sang songs they will have to know for Roundup concluding with taps.

Saturday morning the Scouts were up at 7 a. m. and prepared breakfast outdoors on charcoal burners which will be used at Roundup. Temple Hill Regiment patrol was in charge of flag raising.

A full day of extensive training was planned for all. Special meetings were held for patrol leaders, commissary managers, and recorders while the other scouts unpacked the equipment. Each patrol will have a kitchen box, four sleeping tents and a baker tent.

Early Training Session
This Roundup training session is but one of many to be held in Ulster, Orange and Sullivan County for the coming three months. Those attending were members of de Klompen Popen: Susan Davidson, New Paltz; Jill Gardner, Florida; Julie Houghton, Monroe; Sharon Kinsler, Cornwall; Mary Lou Josefski, Kingston; Joanne Pilus, Highland Mills; Pat Schoomover, Middletown; Frances Feldburg, Monticello.

Members of the Temple Hill Regiment Bea McGovern, Newburgh; Mada Ashkenas, Middletown; Kathy Bennet, Vails Gate; Karen Holloran, Mt. Marion; Wendy Bailey, Goshen; Stephanie Cuddeback, Port Jervis; Sharen Steeves, Washingtonville; Lesley Coulton, Stone Ridge.

Yankees Win, 4-0, Behind Mel Stottlemyre

By MIKE RATHET

Associated Press Sports Writer
Johnny Keane must have known something when he quit the St. Louis Cardinals.

Why, the season's four days old, the Cardinals are the only team in the majors without a victory and Keane's New York Yankees already have posted their first triumph.

Keane, who managed the Cardinals to their World Series triumph over the Yankees last season, acquired victory No. 1 as an American League manager when the Yankees whipped the Los Angeles Angels 4-0 Thursday night.

It was Keane's first triumph in three games as Yankee head man—and the guy who got it for him is an old favorite, Mel Stottlemyre. The young right-hander was the losing pitcher in the seventh game of the World Series as Keane and the Cardinals whipped the Yankees.

While the Yankees were winning their first game, Washington's Bonnie Daniels made a serious bid for the season's first no-hitter in a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox, but Smokey Burgess broke it up with a pinch-hit single with two out in the eighth inning.

Elsewhere, unbeaten Detroit made it three in a row by beating Minnesota 6-4 and Kansas City whipped Cleveland 7-3. Baltimore and Boston were not scheduled.

Stottlemyre kept seven Angels hitless scattered while receiving more than enough support from Roger Maris, who slammed a homer and a single and drove in two runs. Stottlemyre, supported by three double-plays, walked none and struck out four while permitting only one Angel to reach third base.

Maellie Lopez, acquired by Los Angeles in the Bo Belinsky trade, allowed the Yankees only five hits in eight innings but contributed to his own downfall with three walks.

Daniels, who shut out the White Sox twice during the last month of the 1964 season, faced 22 men before a ball was hit out of the infield. Then, with two out in the eighth, Ron Hansen's slow roller skipped through the legs of shortstop Ed Brinkman for an error instead of the third out.

Burgess followed with his hit to right field, and then J. C. Martin singled home a run, giving the White Sox a 1-1 tie. Daniels exited for a pinch hitter in the ninth but not before Frank Howard and Willie Kirkland had put him ahead by crashing consecutive homers off Hoyt Wilhelm.

The Tigers shot past the Twins on homers by Norm Cash and Al Kaline. Kaline's two-run homer in the seventh snapped a 4-4 tie created by Cash's three-run shot in the fifth.
Dave Wickensham, touched for seven hits by Minnesota over the first three innings, allowed only two more in the ninth and grabbed the victory.

KHS Topples Lourdes, 7-0

Rios Pitches Two-Hitter To Earn Win

Gene Rios fired a two-hitter and his Kingston High teammates slammed two hurlers from Our Lady of Lourdes for 10 safeties while stopping the visitors, 7-0, yesterday at the Athletic field. The contest was halted in the last of the sixth by rain.

Rios, the left-handed ace of the KHS mound staff, had a no-hitter until the fifth when Dan Hickey of Lourdes walloped a double to right field. He went to third when the ball was booted.

After Rios walked the next batter, he proceeded to throw strikes past the next two hitters, snuffing out the only threat the visitors were able to offer. Gene fanned 11 in the six innings.

Kingston jumped on loser Bill Martin for three runs in the first inning and added two in the second and another pair in the fourth.

Third baseman Lou Perry led the assault with a double and two singles. He drove in a pair of runs. Joe Schabot and Charley Green also drove home two runs. Green and Jack Schatzel had two hits each.

The locals have a win and a tie in two games and are listed for four contests next week. Kingston hosts Roosevelt at Dietz Stadium on Tuesday at 2; visits Roosevelt on Wednesday at the same time; entertains Arlington at 2:30 on Thursday and Saugerties at 10 a. m. on Friday.

One Team Barred Locals From Interstate - Davi

Fred Davi, Kingston baseball promoter who recently failed to get a franchise in the Interstate Baseball League, blames it all on Manager Dutch Wiseman of the Millbrook team.

It isn't so, countered Wiseman. Davi said his team could have met all the schedule requirements "if Millbrook had agreed to change the Sunday, May 30 date to a later date."

"Wiseman said he would rather go with seven teams than change the date," said Davi. Wiseman promptly denied Davi's statement, pointing out that "I made the original motion to accept Kingston as the 8th team."

Schedule Difficulty

William Wing, league president, said Kingston was refused a franchise because it couldn't meet the schedule commitments. Davi countered that three of the four teams involved agreed to a later date with Kingston, but Millbrook steadfastly refused.

On the subject of Wiseman's statement he would rather go with seven teams, Wing and John Dossy said they couldn't recall hearing Wiseman saying anything like that.

But Davi refused to budge. "As of April 4, I was the 8th team," said the portly mentor. About that fateful April 12 date when the Interstate voted Sharon and Dover Plains into the league before Davi arrived at the meeting.

"At 3 p. m. I called Joe Costine, the schedule maker and told him I would attend, but would be late. At 8:30 p. m. I called him from Arlington and told him I was on my way. I arrived in America at 9:15."

"I told Costine on April 6 I would accept Sunday, May 30, opener at Millbrook," Davi continued.

Saugerties Nips Guilderland, 4-1

Andy Wood surrendered a first inning run and went on to hurl Saugerties High to 4-1 non-league decision yesterday at Guilderland. It was the second straight triumph for coach Pete Kramer's nine.

The home side took advantage of an error to tally in the opening inning. A double by left fielder Walt Pidgeon drove in the marker.

The Sawyers knotted the count in the fourth and clinched matters with a run in the fifth and a pair in the sixth.

Wood allowed two hits, walked four and fanned seven.

Cardinals Still Seeking 1st Win

By MURRAY CHASS

Associated Press Sports Writer

Schoendienst must be starting to wonder about that face even though he was there — as a coach — when St. Louis defeated the New York Yankee in the 1964 World Series.

The defeat left the Cardinals with three straight defeats after an opening-day tie, making them the only winless team in the majors. It also left the big four of their pitching staff with a horrendous 7.36 earned-run average.

As the 1965 baseball season nears its first weekend, the Cardinals haven't looked anything like the team that came from 4 games back and won the National League pennant in the final two weeks of last season.

Even the New York Mets are ahead of St. Louis. The Mets edged Houston 5-4 in 10 innings, marking the earliest they've won a game in their four-year existence.

The Braves, opening their final season in Milwaukee, whipped Chicago 5-1 in the only other NL game. Rain washed out the San Francisco-Philadelphia and Los Angeles-Pittsburgh games.

Two of the Reds' hit off Bob Purkey were home runs. Vada Pinso clouted a three-run blast that capped a four-run uprising in the third inning, and Gordy Coleman unloaded a grand slam in the fifth.

John Tisotouris limited the Cardinals to five hits, two of them run-scoring doubles by Ken Boyer and Dick Groat in the third and another Curt Flood's homer in the eighth.

The Mets won their first game on Bobby Klaus' 10th-inning homer off Claude Raymond after Jim Wynn tied the game for Houston with a two-run homer in the ninth. In their first three seasons, the Mets lost nine, five and four games before winning.

Bob Sadowski held the Cubs to four hits and ignited a three-run Brave outburst in the third with an infield single. The Milwaukee pitcher also figured in a later run with a sacrifice bunt. Ernie Banks homered for Chicago in the fifth.

Dick's Philco Service 2, South Side Men's Club 1.

HARJET MARZ hit a career high 523 on lines of 180, 167 and 176 to lead the Thursday Afternoon Ladies' league. Teammate Anne Cummings led Oehler's Mt. Lodge to a three game sweep of Whispell Construction Co., 508. Others: Roberta Rosenberg 464, Vicky Dye 455. Results: Oehler's Mt. Cardinals Still Seeking 1st Win

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Schoendienst must be starting to wonder about that face even though he was there — as a coach — when St. Louis defeated the New York Yankee in the 1964 World Series.

For the rookie manager still seeks his first victory after Cincinnati walloped St. Louis 10-4 Thursday night.

The defeat left the Cardinals with three straight defeats after an opening day tie, making them the only winless team in the majors. It also left the big four of their pitching staff with a horrendous 7.36 earned-run average.

As the 1965 baseball season nears its first weekend, the Cardinals haven't looked anything like the team that came from 4 games back and won the National League pennant in the final two weeks of last season.

Even the New York Mets are ahead of St. Louis. The Mets edged Houston 5-4 in 10 innings, marking the earliest they've won a game in their four-year existence.

The Braves, opening their final season in Milwaukee, whipped Chicago 5-1 in the only other NL game. Rain washed out the San Francisco-Philadelphia and Los Angeles-Pittsburgh games.

Two of the Reds' hits off Bob Purkey were home runs. Vada Pinson clouted a three-run blast that capped a four-run uprising in the third inning, and Gordy Coleman unloaded a grand slam in the fifth.

John Tsitouris limited the Cardinals to five hits, two of them run-scoring doubles by Ken Boyer and Dick Groat in the third and another Curt Flood's homer in the eighth.

The Mets won their first game on Bobby Klaus' 10th-inning homer off Claude Raymond after Jim Wynn tied the game for Houston with a two-run homer in the ninth. In their first three seasons, the Mets lost nine, five and four games before winning.

Bob Sadowski held the Cubs to four hits and pitched a three-run Brave outburst in the third with an infield single. The Milwaukee pitcher also figured in a later run with a sacrifice bunt. Ernie Banks homered for Chicago in the fifth.

Telasky Gets MVP Honors; Uhl Top Scorer

By ED PALLADINO
Freeman Sports Staff

Bill Telasky and Ed Kazakovich combined for 71 points and the talented Pine Plains Bombardiers swept to their second straight Kingston Basketball tournament championship, 114-92, over Ray's Tackle Shop last night at the Municipal Auditorium.

George Stuetzle's Bombardiers broke open a tight game with a 34-point surge in the second period while the home side could score but 17. This sent the Bombardiers off the floor with a 56-35 lead at the interim and the closest Ray's got in the second half was 11 points.

Telasky scored 41 points and earned himself a second consecutive Most Valuable Player award. He joined teammates York Lares and Kazakovich on the All-Star team. Joe Uhl and Joe Klonowski of Ray's were also selected to the team and Uhl's 22 points earned him the trophy for most markers in the tourney. He finished with 124, besting Sam Brown of Armstrong's, who had 120 and Telasky, who had 111.

Ray's which finished second to the Bombardiers in both the Hudson Valley and Kingston tournaments, was within four points, 22-18, after the first period.

A Hot Period

The champions started to sizzle in the second quarter and all hopes of a close game evaporated with the surge.

Telasky, who was all over the court on both offense and defense, had 16 buckets and nine free throws for his total. Kazakovich, whose jump shots from the corners brought reactions from the crowd, potted 13 buckets and four foul shots.

Lares and Bob Litwiler scored 12 points each and Warren Isaac, the All-Met performer from Iona College, had 11 points. Uhl finished with 22, Klonowski 20 and steady Bob Bondar with 19 for Ward Dunham's quintet, which finished a good tournament year.

Tops on Four Ballots

In the balloting for the all-star team, the five-man committee selected Telasky first on four of the ballots and third on the other. Uhl had three seconds, a fourth and a sixth. His 39 points were second to Telasky's 37.

Lares was third in the final balloting, getting a second, three thirds and a seventh for 37 points. Kazakovich had a first, second, two fourths and a tenth. He had 34 points. Klonowski had 25 points on two fifths, a sixth and two sevenths. Isaac was sixth with 21 points and Bill Slicks of Boyle earned 20 points for seventh place in the overall balloting.

Traffic Congestion Due Few More Days

Traffic congestion on the Mid-Hudson Bridge at Poughkeepsie is expected to continue into next week, until repairs are made to some of the grates on the expansion on the east side of the Hudson River span.

Police said traffic backed up from the west end of Poughkeepsie up to Washington Street.

The Bethlehem Steel Co. began work of repairing and repainting the grates on Tuesday. Similar work was done on the west end of the bridge about two years ago.

A Bridge Authority spokesman explained that because of the narrow structure of the bridge, it is necessary to divert traffic into one lane at times, as a section of grates is removed. The situation probably will continue to early next week.

Report Coup Foiled

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — An attempt by pro-Peking Communist party leaders and army officers to overthrow Bulgaria's Moscow-Aligned regime reportedly has been crushed by army and security police forces.

Reports of the attempted coup reached Vienna from Sofia through independent sources Wednesday. Official Bulgarian sources had no immediate comment.

The reports gave this picture: The coup was launched April 8 by a number of Stalinist party leaders headed by Ivan Todorov-Goruyay, a member of the party's Central Committee and of the Bulgarian Cabinet. The rebel officers were headed by Maj. Gen. Tsvetko Anev, commander of the Sofia garrison.

The Red Chinese Embassy in Sofia helped work out plans for the revolt. When it collapsed, Todorov-Goruyay committed suicide. Anev and a number of other officers were arrested.

Power Mower Taken

The sheriff's department is investigating the theft of a power mower taken some time Wednesday night from the premises of Mrs. Shirley Pape of Spring Lake Trailer Park. Mrs. Pape reported she had observed a car parked in the area during the night.

Freeport Driver Lauds Feraca for Auto Help

Being the operator of a disabled motor vehicle on a Sunday morning more than 100 miles from home when most of the automotive garages are closed can produce quite an uncanny feeling.

But it can also bring another kind of feeling when the motorist can find a garage; get the vehicle fixed; drive to his destination, and make it safely home without a hitch.

Within View of Station

It happened last Sunday morning near Kingston to a Long Island woman driver whose car broke down on Route 32 near Rosendale.

Joseph Feraca, operator of a service station on Route 32, said he spotted the stopped car with in view of his station—which at that point was open for service.

He went to the driver, who identified herself as Kathryn Chaiko of Freeport, N. Y. She explained that she was en route to visit friends in High Falls Park with three young girls as passengers when the car brakes failed. It looked like the proverbial "end of the line."

Feraca managed to get the vehicle to his station, further managed to get the necessary repair parts and get the brakes repaired, which wasn't any easy task for a Sunday. A short time later, what appeared to be a dead end for the disabled car and its occupants turned out to be a brief delay and new found friendships.

Serves as Constable

Feraca, who also serves as a constable in the Town of Esopus, found a letter in his mail Thursday from Freeport. It conveyed in its simplest and most sincere way exactly what it feels like — at least to one thankful motorist — to be transformed from a state of near panic one hour into a thoroughly appreciative person the next.

The letter to Feraca: "I want to thank you for all your help and the courtesy shown to me this past weekend. Being 120 miles away from home and having a broken brake line, I was almost in a state of panic. Your prompt and immediate attention in the matter was appreciated more than you can imagine.

"Thank you once again, and we hope to see you soon for gas only. I hope."

"Very truly yours, Kathryn Chaiko, 175 Park Avenue, Freeport, N. Y."

Traffic Congestion Due Few More Days

Traffic congestion on the Mid-Hudson Bridge at Poughkeepsie is expected to continue into next week, until repairs are made to some of the grates on the expansion on the east side of the Hudson River span.

Police said traffic backed up from the west end of Poughkeepsie up to Washington Street.

The Bethlehem Steel Co. began work of repairing and repainting the grates on Tuesday. Similar work was done on the west end of the bridge about two years ago.

A Bridge Authority spokesman explained that because of the narrow structure of the bridge, it is necessary to divert traffic into one lane at times, as a section of grates is removed. The situation probably will continue to early next week.

Report Coup Foiled

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — An attempt by pro-Peking Communist party leaders and army officers to overthrow Bulgaria's Moscow-Aligned regime reportedly has been crushed by army and security police forces.

Reports of the attempted coup reached Vienna from Sofia through independent sources Wednesday. Official Bulgarian sources had no immediate comment.

The reports gave this picture: The coup was launched April 8 by a number of Stalinist party leaders headed by Ivan Todorov-Goruyay, a member of the party's Central Committee and of the Bulgarian Cabinet. The rebel officers were headed by Maj. Gen. Tsvetko Anev, commander of the Sofia garrison.

The Red Chinese Embassy in Sofia helped work out plans for the revolt. When it collapsed, Todorov-Goruyay committed suicide. Anev and a number of other officers were arrested.

Power Mower Taken

The sheriff's department is investigating the theft of a power mower taken some time Wednesday night from the premises of Mrs. Shirley Pape of Spring Lake Trailer Park. Mrs. Pape reported she had observed a car parked in the area during the night.

Launches Second Stage

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP) — Authoritative Israeli sources claimed today that Lebanon this week launched the second stage of its part in the plan by Arab countries to divert headwaters of the Jordan River.

The tract cleared along the route for diversion channels has been widened, the sources reported.

The Arab states have vowed to divert the Jordan before the river reaches Israeli territory to sabotage Israel's multimillion-dollar project to bring Jordan water from the Sea of Galilee to the Negev Desert. Israel has said interference with the irrigation project would be regarded as a cause of war.

'Looked Like End of Line'

Freeport Driver Lauds Feraca for Auto Help

Being the operator of a disabled motor vehicle on a Sunday morning more than 100 miles from home when most of the automotive garages are closed can produce quite an uncanny feeling.

But it can also bring another kind of feeling when the motorist can find a garage; get the vehicle fixed; drive to his destination, and make it safely home without a hitch.

Within View of Station
It happened last Sunday morning near Kingston to a Long Island woman driver whose car broke down on Route 32 near Rosendale.

Joseph Feraca, operator of a service station on Route 32, said he spotted the stopped car with-in view of his station—which at that point was open for service.

He went to the driver, who identified herself as Kathryn Chaiko of Freeport, N. Y. She explained that she was en route to visit friends in High Falls Park with three young girls as passengers when the car brakes failed. It looked like the proverbial "end of the line."

Feraca managed to get the vehicle to his station, further managed to get the necessary repair parts and get the brakes repaired, which wasn't any easy task for a Sunday. A short time later, what appeared to be a dead end for the disabled car and its occupants turned out to be a brief delay and new found friendships.

Serves as Constable

Feraca, who also serves as a constable in the Town of Esopus, found a letter in his mail Thursday from Freeport. It conveyed in its simplest and most sincere way exactly what it feels like at least to one thankful motorist to be transformed from a state of near panic one hour into a thoroughly appreciative person the next.

The letter to Feraca: "I want to thank you for all your help and the courtesy shown to me this past weekend. Being 120 miles away from home and having a broken brake line, I was almost in a state of panic. Your prompt and immediate attention in the matter was appreciated more than you can imagine."

"Thank you once again, and we hope to see you soon for gas only, I hope."

"Very truly yours, Kathryn Chaiko, 175 Park Avenue, Freeport, N. Y."

Probation Topic For Kiwanis Club

"Probation today is big business" said Robert Sullivan, senior probation examiner of the State of New York Department of Correction, in speaking before the Kingston Kiwanis Club on the subject of the importance of probation in the functioning of the Family Court.

The reorganization of the court structure in the State of New York, in November of 1961, brought the creation of the Family Court — "bringing under one jurisdiction practically all domestic problems," Sullivan said.

He pointed out that under the old system a family could possibly be divided between a county court, a justice of the peace court, and children's court — and one court not know that members of the same family were involved in other courts. The Family Court could treat practically all such matters under one jurisdiction.

Three Major Roles

Probation plays three major roles, according to the speaker. He listed these as "intake, investigation, and supervision." He underscored the role of intakes as the one closely related with the Family Court, noting that this division was concerned "as to whether a case goes to an agency or to the court."

Questions answered by the probation department could concern whether or not an individual needed punishment or help, whether he was a hardened delinquent or could be treated, whether marriage was advisable in some cases, or whether it might become an added problem for the community.

Not Confirmed Criminals

said that "these were not acts of confirmed criminals but rather those of disturbed individuals." All of these cases cited by the speaker were concerned with people already on probation, but were cases where adequate supervision by the probation department was lacking due to manpower shortage. He pointed out "if the probation services were adequate, they could materially reduce such incidents."

A probation officer should be able to make social studies of individuals and plan treatment for the judge's approval; he should be able to help a person and to bring about changes; he has to know something about the law, and also have a knowledge of human growth and development; an he should have a considerable knowledge of the community, Sullivan said.

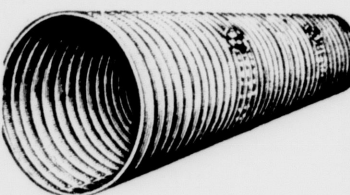

"New York State recognizes the importance of probation," the speaker said "and has paid half the cost since 1955." He further revealed that the state offers an "in-service training program," and also a scholarship program for those interested in probation as a career.

Big Business Today

In conclusion, Sullivan remarked that "probation today is big business," that over 16 million dollars is spent annually by communities for probationary services, and that "over 40,000 people are on probation in New York State at any given time."

Steel Outlook

at separate news conferences after talks recessed for the Easter weekend.

McDonald said he hoped the industry "would re-examine its conscience." He said the union was prepared to consider any added proposals Monday.

Sources said the union wanted 16 cents an hour and an extension no longer than 45 days.

The industry has said since talks started last January that it would agree to no more than a 2 per cent increase per year in the average steelworker earnings of $4.40 a hour.

Under a one-year limited agreement the industry first suggested earlier this week, this would have figured to slightly less than 10 cents an hour.

The industry's latest proposal called for an extension of the current contract past May 1 and signing of a limited agreement that could be reopened any time after that date with 60 days' notice.

Union sources said the money and not the length of the extension was the main point of disagreement.

New Code Given By Katzenbach On Criminal Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new set of rules governing the release of information on criminal cases by all Justice Department law enforcement officers was issued today by Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach.

The attorney general announced the code in a speech to the convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, a body alert to any attempt to suppress news.

Just Formalization

But Katzenbach described the rules as a formalization of the same policies generally, now observed by the department in trying to protect a defendant's right to a fair trial while respecting the public's right to be informed.

Katzenbach's move was a fresh development in a debate which has raged among journalists, lawyers and jurists since the arrest of Lee Harvey Oswald for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Should there be additional safeguards against the publication of information which might influence a jury?

The department's new code specifies a number of facts which may be released, following an arrest, by FBI agents, U.S. marshals, federal prosecutors and other officers of the department.

These include the defendant's name and identifying background information; the charges against him; the arresting agency and length of the investigation, and the circumstances of the arrest, including the time and place, resistance, pursuit, possession and use of weapons, and a description of items seized.

Data to Be Withheld

But Katzenbach's orders direct that officials "should refrain from making available:

"Observations about defendant's character;
"Statements, admissions, confessions, or alibis attributable to a defendant.

"References to investigative procedures, such as fingerprints, polygraph examinations, ballistic tests, or laboratory tests.
"Statements concerning the identity, credibility, or testimony of prospective witnesses.

"Statements concerning evidence or argument in the case, whether or not it is anticipated that such evidence or argument will be used at trial."

The attorney general ruled that officers shall not volunteer for publication any information on a defendant's prior record, but may provide a record of convictions upon a specific inquiry. His statement also declared:

"Personnel of the Department of Justice shall take no action to encourage or assist news media in photographing or televising a

Crash Kills Widow

FLEMINGTON, N.J. (AP)—

A two-car crash killed Mrs. Margaret E. Hulse, 54, on ram-slick Route 69 Thursday.

State Police said Mrs. Hulse, a widow who lived here, apparently lost control of her small foreign car on a curve and went into the path of an oncoming car occupied by two Princeton University students.

Its driver, James M. Franklin, 21, of Wrentham, Ill., was not injured, but his passenger, John R. Turney, 22, of Indiana, Pa., was hospitalized with severe head cuts.

Police said the students had started out from Princeton, 12 miles away, to visit Cornell University.

Probation Topic For Kiwanis Club

"Probation today is big business," said Robert Sullivan, senior probation examiner of the State of New York Department of Correction, in speaking before the Kingston Kiwanis Club on the subject of the importance of probation in the functioning of the Family Court.

The reorganization of the court structure in the State of New York, in November of 1961, brought the creation of the Family Court — "bringing under one jurisdiction practically all domestic problems," Sullivan said.

He pointed out that under the old system a family could possibly be divided between a county court, a justice of the peace court, and children's court — and one court not know that members of the same family were involved in other courts. The Family Court could treat practically all such matters under one jurisdiction.

Three Major Roles

Probation plays three major roles, according to the speaker. He listed these as "intake, investigation, and supervision." He underscored the role of intake as the one closely related with the Family Court, noting that this division was concerned "as to whether a case goes to an agency or to the court."

Questions answered by the probation department could concern whether or not an individual needed punishment or help, whether he was a hardened delinquent or could be treated, whether marriage was advisable in some cases or whether it might become an added problem for the community.

Not Confirmed Criminals

Sullivan quoted some newspaper headlines which featured killings and maimings, and then said that "these were not acts of confirmed criminals but rather those of disturbed individuals." All of these cases cited by the speaker were concerned with people already on probation, but were cases where adequate supervision by the probation department was lacking due to manpower shortage. He pointed out "if the probation services were adequate, they can materially reduce such incidences."

A probation officer should be able to make social studies of individuals and plan treatment for the judge's approval; he should be able to help a person and to bring about changes; he has to know something about the law, and also have a knowledge of human growth and development; an he should have a considerable knowledge of the community, Sullivan said.

"New York State recognizes the importance of probation," the speaker said "and has paid half the cost since 1955." He further revealed that the state offers an "in-service training program," and also a scholarship program for those interested in probation as a career.

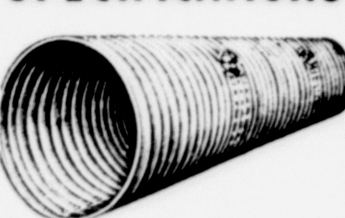

Big Business Today

In conclusion, Sullivan remarked that "probation today is big business," that over 16 million dollars is spent annually by communities for probationary services, and that "over 40,000 people are on probation in New York State at any given time."

Steel Outlook

at separate news conferences after talks recessed for the Easter weekend.

McDonald said he hoped the industry "would re-examine its conscience." He said the union was prepared to consider any added proposals Monday.

Sources said the union wanted 16 cents an hour and an extension no longer than 45 days.

The industry has said since talks started last January that it would agree to no more than a 2 per cent increase per year in the average steelworker earnings of $4.40 an hour.

Under a one-year limited agreement the industry first suggested earlier this week, this would have figured to slightly less than 10 cents an hour.

The industry's latest proposal called for an extension of the current contract past May 1 and signing of a limited agreement that could be reopened any time after that date with 60 days' notice.

Union sources said the money and not the length of the extension was the main point of disagreement.

New Code Given By Katzenbach On Criminal Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new set of rules governing the release of information on criminal cases by all Justice Department law enforcement officers was issued today by Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach.

The attorney general announced the code in a speech to the convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, a body alert to any attempt to suppress news.

Just Formalization

But Katzenbach described the rules as a formalization of the same policies, generally, now observed by the department in trying to protect a defendant's right to a fair trial while respecting the public's right to be informed.

Katzenbach's move was a fresh development in a debate which has raged among journalists, lawyers and jurists since the arrest of Lee Harvey Oswald for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Should there be additional safeguards against the publication of information which might influence a jury?

The department's new code specifies a number of facts which may be released, following an arrest, by FBI agents, U.S. marshals, federal prosecutors and other officers of the department.

These include the defendant's name and identifying background information; the charges against him; the arresting agency and length of the investigation, and the circumstances of the arrest, including the time and place, resistance, pursuit, possession and use of weapons, and a description of items seized.

Data to Be Withheld

But Katzenbach's orders direct that officials "should refrain from making available."

"Observations about defendant's character," "Statements, admissions, confessions, or alibis attributable to a defendant."

"References to investigative procedures, such as fingerprints, polygraph examinations, ballistic tests, or laboratory tests."

"Statements concerning the identity, credibility, or testimony of prospective witnesses."

"Statements concerning evidence or argument in the case, whether or not it is anticipated that such evidence or argument will be used at trial."

The attorney general ruled that officers shall not volunteer for publication any information on a defendant's prior record, but may provide a record of convictions upon a specific inquiry. His statement also declared:

"Personnel of the Department of Justice shall take no action to encourage or assist news media in photographing or televising a

Crash Kills Widow

FLEMINGTON, N.J. (AP)—A two-car crash killed Mrs. Margaret E. Hulse, 54, on ramble Road 69 Thursday.

State Police said Mrs. Hulse, a widow who lived here, apparently lost control of her small foreign car on a curve and went into the path of an oncoming car occupied by two Princeton University students.

Its driver, James M. Franklin, 21, of Waukegan, Ill., was not injured, but his passenger, John R. Turney, 22, of Indiana, Pa., was hospitalized with severe head cuts.

Police said the students had started out from Princeton, 12 miles away, to visit Cornell University.

being held or transported in federal custody.

Departmental representatives should not make available photographs of a defendant unless a law enforcement function is served thereby.
